West Indies' Worst.

Crash in Ohio.

By the Associated Press.

Toledo, Ohio, July 31.—The Commodore Vanderbilt of the New York Central Railroad crashed into the rear of a sister luxury train, the streamlined Mercury, 20 miles east of here tonight, injuring at least 12 passengers and eight of the train crew.

The Mercury, Detroit to Cleveland, running eight minutes ahead of the Chicago to New York Commodore Vanderbilt, struck an auto at a crossing 2 miles east of Rocky Ridge, Ohio, and had backed to a stop when the Vanderbilt plowed into its observation car.

Passengers on both trains were thrown from their seats and shaken. The observation car and third coach on the Mercury left the trucks.

Members of the Mercury crew reported the train merely grazed the automobile, which was driven away. The train crew said occupants of the car probably were not injured.

Eight members of the train crew were taken to hospital at Port Clinton, Ohio., and 12 passengers were brought to the Toledo hospitals.

Woman Unconscious.

Several passenger on the observation car jumped from the platform into a field when they saw the oncoming Commodore.

Donald Imhoff and Harry Nissley, both of Cleveland, were among those who jumped. They said the Commodore "bounced back and the Mercury went ahead" with the impact.

"I saw it coming and I jumped and ran like hell," Nissley said.

Speed Cut to 10 M. P. H.

Brakemen on the Mercury raced down the tracks to flag the oncoming train which, observation car passengers said, slowed to about 10 miles per hour.

Tom K. Evans, of Detroit, his wife and 7-month-old daughter, Carol, were among observation car passengers.

"I saw the flagman cutting him (the engineer of the Commodore Vanderbilt) down," Evans said. "My first thought was of Carol, and I jumped from the car with her."

Neither was hurt, but Mrs. Evans, who remained on the Mercury, suffered slight injuries.

Crew Members Listed.

Morgan Scion Stricken as He Toils on Farm

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, July 31.—An appendectomy ruined today a study of Midwestern farming conditions being made incognito by "Farmhand" John Pierpoint Morgan 3d, 21-year-old grandson of New York's famous international banker, J. P. Morgan, jr.

Young Morgan was stricken while working as a hand on the 100-acre Homer Addison farm, 2 miles north of Knightstown. He had "pitched in" to thresh wheat, milk cows and do other chores.

"Jack" Feeling Fine.

Dr. John I. Waller, Knightstown physician and surgeon, who performed the operation with the aid of an Indianapolis surgeon in a hospital (St. Vincent's) here today, said the operation was successful and Morgan was "feeling fine."

Known only as "Jack Morgan" to farmers in the vicinity, where he had lived more than six weeks, they said the young man "seemed to be a willing hand, but a little green."

Informed of Morgan's identity, Dr. Waller called the youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Junius Spencer Morgan, at Glen Cove, Long Island, N. Y., and received permission to perform the operation. The son was removed to Indianapolis and the parents said they would attempt to fly here tonight.

Teacher Found Job.

Morgan was surrounded with secrecy at the hospital, where attaches refused to give out information. He is listed on the records as "John Morgan," of New York.

He came to the Indiana farm through friendship established with a teacher while a junior at Harvard University. The teacher, who lives near Greendeld, was asked where Morgan could find work on a farm through the summer and the Addison place was recommended.

Ships and Planes Mass for a Final Hunt for Clipper

By the Associated Press.

Manila, July 31.—Warships and fighting planes stood by tonight for what was expected to be their final quest off the eastern Philippines for the missing Hawaii Clipper last heard from at 11:09 p. m. E. S. T., last Thursday.

From the air and the ocean surface they examined during the day the oil "slick" which convinced many experts the clipper plunged into the Pacific with six passengers and a crew of nine 500 miles east of Manila.

Italy's 'Aryanism' Dominates Press

Rome, July 31 (AP).—Sunday newspapers here today continued to publish great headlines on Premier Mussolini's statement at Forli yesterday in which he made known his determination to "march straight ahead" with the policy which holds Italians are of the Aryan race and Jews are not.

Commentators stressed the idea that Italian racial doctrine was based on biological theory instead of religious or moral grounds, which was regarded as an effort to combat the impression created by Pope Pius' query last week "why in the world Italy unfortunately felt the need to imitate Germany?"

Japan Takes 4 Kilometers Of Reds' Soil

Speculation Feverish as Far East Army Is Held Poised.

By the United Press.

Moscow, July 31.—The official Soviet news agency, Tass, announced tonight "Japanese militarists violated the Soviet frontier" on hills west of Lake Khassan, and described meagerly a week-end battle lasting several hours in which "Japanese troops suffered great losses."

"Opening artillery fire unexpectedly, Japanese troops in the night time suddenly attacked Soviet frontier guard troops stationed on the border," the agency stated.

"The Japanese occupied Soviet territory to a depth of four kilometers and fighting, which lasted for several hours, broke out. The Japanese met a strong rebuff and Japanese troops suffered great losses in men and equipment. Losses among Soviet troops are being checked."

12-Hour Battle.

Today's reports of a 12-hour battle along the Far East border were treated more circumspectly than most of the frontier incidents of the last four years. There have been 56 such Soviet-Japanese incidents since May, 1934. The most serious of these was in June, 1937, when Soviet-Japanese troops and gunboats clashed along the Amur River.

The Soviet government has issued official communiques in connection with every one of these previous incidents, but authorities said some doubt existed as to whether one would be released regarding the new outbreak.

Hardly more than two dozen persons in all Moscow, and no other Russians outside of those living in the Far Eastern scene of the

Shirley Is Kept In Bed Second Day With Fever

Boston, July 31 (AP).—Still running a temperature, Shirley Temple had to stay in bed again today.

Dr. Harold L. Higgins, child specialist, who remained at her hotel overnight, reported the youngster had spent a "rather good night." He said her morning temperature was 99.2.

Dr. Higgins and Dr. Joseph L. Lewis ordered Shirley to bed yesterday after the young star showed no inclination to eat. They diagnosed her case as a slight indisposition any child might have.

Mr. and Mrs. Temple said they had made no arrangements for resumption of their sightseeing tour of historic Massachusetts spots.

A.F.L. Finds Business on Rise Again

Says Present High Level of Wages Proving Recovery Force.

The American Federation of Labor reported last night that signs of business improvement have multiplied during July and that the increase in unemployment has been checked.

In its monthly survey of business, the A. F. of L. said that the "present high level of workers' income will prove a powerful lifting force," and warned that "wage cutting at the present time is against the public interest."

"It is significant that although business activity fell back to within 18 per cent of the lowest depression level, workers' income has fallen far less and at its lowest 1938 point was still 53 per cent higher than its depression bottom," the survey said.

Buying Power Up.

"For this we may thank the wage increases of 1937 and the absence of widespread wage cutting in 1938. This reserve of buying power has been a bulwark against further decline. It has taken retailers' stocks of goods off the market and created a healthy basis for the revival now starting."

The survey said that "it will be many months before the depression losses can be recovered," and added that "a gradual recovery would be far more healthy than a rapid speculative advance."

It praised the Government's "pump priming" efforts to stop the depression and said that "since the cost of living today (June) is a 2½ per cent below last year's levels (June, 1937) every dollar of wages paid out on these programs this summer will buy more than it would have bought last year."

"Priming" Is a Help.

Past experience has proved that "pump priming" is not effective unless "well timed," the survey said, adding that "in the present case, however, the pump priming seemed to come at a strategic moment."

June employment increased 7,000 and trade union employment reports for 24 cities which have been showing employment gains ever since March recorded a much larger gain in early July than in June, the survey said.

It also quoted statistics showing fewer business failures, increasing production in the steel industry, declining inventories in the hands of wholesalers and declared that a "rise in steel operations always adds impetus to business revival."

"With a brighter business outlook ahead and sales increasing in the country generally, firms which had contemplated wage cuts will be more able to tide over the present difficult period without reducing wages."

NLRB to Resume Iowa Inquiry Over Governor's Threat

By the Associated Press.

A spokesman for the Labor Relations Board said last night the board would resume today its hearing into the Maytag strike at Newton, Iowa.

The spokesman said Gov. Kraschel had threatened to terminate the hearings but had issued no order to that effect.

Dispatches from Des Moines reported the Governor had ordered Maj. Gen. Mathew A. Tinley, commander of National Guards, on duty in the strike zone, to close the hearing because he felt it might delay settlement of the dispute.

Earlier board members and legal advisers said they would not comment until they received a copy of the order, which was issued to State troops on duty at Newton.

While there was a possibility the hearing might be transferred to Washington, it was said, nothing would be decided until the order and circumstances surrounding its issuance had been studied.

Church Leader Found Slain in Chicken Coop

Ex-Vestryman Lived Alone, Held Mortgages Upon Much Property.

By the Associated Press.

Algonac, Mich., July 31.—The battered body of Augustus W. Roil, 45, amateur artist and former church vestryman, was found today in a chicken coop behind his farmhouse two and a half miles west of here. Nearby lay a broken hoe handle.

The body was found by Frank Sharrow, St. Clair County deputy sheriff, and two other men, who had gone to the farm to "talk over" a projected real estate deal with Roil.

Deputy Sharrow had made a call for the same purpose Friday night and failed to find Roil. When he returned this morning he found a door ajar and an electric stove turned on, and immediately began a search of the farm.

Door Padlocked.

Sharrow saw the body in the chicken coop, the door padlocked on the outside. He summoned Michigan State police, who broke open the door to reach the battered body, lying in a pool of blood.

State Police Sergt. Stanley Peoviak said an autopsy showed Roil had died from a brain concussion and he probably had been dead from 24 to 48 hours.

Roil, a bachelor, came to Algonac 15 years ago from St. Johns, N. F. He lived in a three-room cottage on his five-acre farm. On the walls of the house hung a number of his paintings. Two years ago he resigned as vestryman of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Algonac and since then he had spent the winters in Phoeniz, Ariz.

Browning, Facing Likely Defeat, Denies Plan to Use Troops.

By Sidney Olson.
A Staff Correspondent.

Nashville, Tenn., July 31.—The political stage was set tonight for any contingency this week in Tennessee.

There may be no violence, not a shot fired; no heads bashed in; not even a black eye—but all the materials are handy, and only the spark is needed to set off an actual battle over Tennessee's primary election next Thursday.

SIDNEY OLSON.

Gov. Gordon Browning, rounding into the final laps of his desperate stumping campaign that has carried him at least once into every one of the State's 95 counties tonight declared that "unless I change my mind" troops will not be ordered into Memphis.

Charges "Box-Stuffing."

He said:

"No orders have been given or will be given to the National Guard to proceed into Memphis. But it is silly to think the Governor cannot order the Guard wherever he wishes to. It is not the American way to use force. But the State Crime commission and the Federal investigators will prove a deterrent to the unbridled box stuffing that prevails in Shelby County. As a solemn warning, I must say that I have been repeatedly urged by good citizens in Shelby County to send them the protection of troops. So I have asked a portion of the Guard to remain in the State, and they may be used against the systematic intimidation of voters that is practiced in Memphis."

But Crump headquarters here thought that Browning might withhold final announcement until possibly Wednesday night, march his troops in, and thus be in possession of the "fort" before an injunction could be obtained.

Both Browning, whose defeat is generally forecast here, and his enemy "the big boss," Ed Crump, of Memphis, are determined that peace and quiet prevail these last five days. Crump insists that no hair of the Governor's head will be harmed when Browning speaks at the Fair Grounds in Memphis tomorrow night. Browning hopes there will be no disorder at the

Smith to Beat Dodd, Virginia Survey Shows

Straw Ballot Gives Incumbent Wide Margin in Most of Counties.

By Edward T. Folliard.

Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, will be nominated for a fifth term in tomorrow's primary election in Virginia's Eighth Congressional District, judging by results of a superficial poll taken yesterday by correspondents of The Washington Post.

The poll—admittedly touching a mere fragment of sentiment and conducted only among those owning telephones—showed Smith to be an overwhelming favorite over William E. Dodd, jr., of Round Hill, son of the former Ambassador to Germany.

Dodd, on the basis of The Post canvass, is strongest in nearby Arlington County, which in recent years has seen a large influx of newcomers, particularly Government employes. Here the poll showed Dodd to be running a neck-and-neck race with Smith.

Smith, according to the poll, was far ahead of Dodd in Alexandria and Charlottesville, the two free cities in the district, and in Fairfax, Culpeper, Fauquier, Loudoun and Albemarle counties. The Dodd farm is located in Loudoun. Alto-

'Hitler of Harlem,' Pilot Die in Plane Crash; Aide Hurt

New York, July 31 (AP).—Two men were killed and a woman was seriously injured today in an airplane crash two miles east of Hempstead, Long Island, which horrified thousands of Sunday motorists on the Southern State parkway.

The dead were Gureu Sufi Abdul Hamid, bishop of the Universal Holy Temple of Tranquility in Harlem and sometimes known as "The Black Hitler of Harlem," and Fred Burkhardt, a pilot employed by an aircraft firm at Roosevelt Field.

Hour's Parade Will Welcome Corrigan on Visit to Capital

Doug Corrigan will repeat his Ireland-via-California tactics in Washington Monday, August 8, when he arrives at the airport and sets out to call on District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen by way of Mount Vernon, Alexandria and the Capitol.

"We're going to make this a dignified and pleasant thing," Secretary Fairfax Nauity of the reception committee declared yesterday in announcing plans for the celebration.

"We're asking people not to throw paper and act childishly. This is the Nation's Capital, not a hick town."

Yesterday, aboard the liner Manhattan, Corrigan revealed he was studying navigation under the ship's captain to correct the lamentable ignorance which led him east on a westward flight. He admitted, though, he still rated a mark of zero in the science of finding where he was.

"I got a look through the sextant this morning," said Corrigan from the liner over a radio hookup. "I saw the sun all right, but I didn't know how to figure out where I was afterward."

The Manhattan is expected to dock Thursday in New York, where Corrigan will land in the midst of a controversy between New York and Brooklyn over which should shriek itself silly first in welcome. Brooklyn claims the honor because Corrigan took off "for Los Angeles" from there; New York because such a celebration does not exist until it takes place on Broadway.

The reception here will be almost as Irish as that given the brash young trans-Atlantic flier on his arrival in

Trust Violation Laid Also to American Medical Association.

Arnold to Ask Jury Investigation Soon

Accuses Two Groups of Barring Physicians to Co-operative.

The Justice Department yesterday accused the District Medical Society and the American Medical Association of violation of antitrust laws in opposing the Group Health Association and announced a grand jury investigation to ascertain the persons responsible.

Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of antitrust prosecutions, announced a preliminary study had convinced the department of antitrust law violations.

"The particular persons responsible for this violation can only be ascertained by a grand jury investigation," he said. "Such an investigation will be undertaken by the department in the near future."

National Importance Seen.

The inquiry, announced three days after a decision by Justice Bailey in District court that G. H. A. functioned legally, was considered of national significance, since co-operative health groups in 60 cities cover more than 1,500,000 subscribers.

Arnold charged the two medical associations attempted to prevent the G. H. A. from functioning by three methods:

1. "Threatened expulsion from the District Medical Society of doctors who accept employment with the G. H. A. Because of the power and standing of the medical society, this causes G. H. A. great difficulty in employing competent physicians.

2. "Threatened explusion from the Medical Society of doctors who take part in medical consultations with doctors on the G. H. A. staff. This in effect amounts to forcing members of the Medical Society to participate in an illegal boycott of G. H. A. doctors.

3. "The exclusion from Washington hospitals of the G. H. A. staff doctors; this has been accomplished either in combination with the various hospitals or by means of influence, which may or may not have amounted to coercion, upon them. This exclusion has made it impossible for doctors affiliated with the G. H. A. to practice their profession in the hospitals and it has prevented members of the association who enter the hospitals as patients from having the services of the physicians of their own choice."

"Medical Cost Too High."

This, said Arnold, "is a violation of the antitrust laws because it is an attempt on the part of one group of physicians to prevent qualified doctors from carrying on their calling and to prevent members of G. H. A. from selecting physicians of their own choice. The department interprets the law as prohibiting combinations which prevent others from competing for services as well as goods."

The importance attached to the promised grand jury action was pointed out by Arnold, who said, "Although this proceeding concerns especially the District of Columbia, it is selected because its importance is Nation-wide and its value as a precedent is of far-reaching consequence on one of our most pressing problems.

"The illegal activities of organized medicine in this instance are typical of what has occurred in other cities throughout the country whenever co-operative health groups have been formed."

In reviewing broader aspects of the national health problem and economic conditions of medicine "which make this suit of great importance," Arnold said: "in spite of great technical efficiency, the medical profession has not been successful in furnishing adequate medical care to all the American people at a cost that

2 Dictators Renounce Penalty Placed on Bulgaria After War

By the United Press.

Sofia, Bulgaria, July 31.—Premier George Kiusseivanoff of Bulgaria and Dictator John Metaxas of Greece met today in the Greek seaport of Salonica and formally renounced the military penalties imposed upon Bulgaria by the post-war peace treaties.

The surprise meeting of the two dictators, whose countries were engaged in bloodshed for years following the World War, was revealed when military planes circled over Sofia dropping thousands of leaflets anhouncing repudiation of the defense clause of the treaty of Neuilly-sur-Seine, signed November 27, 1919.

Dr. Kiusseivanoff, Premier of Bulgaria since November 24, 1935, and Gen. Metaxas announced in a communique they had signed an agreement at Salonica within the Bulgaria-Balkan entente abolishing all military, naval and air defense clauses contained in the treaty of Neuilly.

The communique also said that under the agreement "each Balkan country refrains from using force in accordance with treaties of non-aggression signed by them."

Under the Neuilly Treaty, Bulgaria, with an army of about 60,000 before the World War when she joined forces with Germany, was limited to a standing army of 20,000 men, enrolled by voluntary system and was prohibited from conscription. Her frontier gendarmerie and forest guards were limited to 10,000.

She was permitted no military or naval planes and was forced to surrender all warships and submarines, maintaining only a few torpedo boats and motor boats for police purposes in the Danube.

Blast at Purge Opens Critical Primary Week

Pettengill Hits Report of O'Connor Peril; Six States to Vote.

The most important week of primary elections in the 1938 campaign, from the standpoint of tense public interest, opened yesterday with a Democratic attack on the New Deal's contemplated "purge" of Representative O'Connor, chairman of the House Rules Committee and opponent of several of President Roosevelt's legislative undertakings.

At the same time Republicans of the nation announced plans for a series of party rallies throughout the country on Constitution Day, September 17.

The attack on the O'Connor "purge" came from Representative Pettengill (Democrat), of Indiana, who assailed the doctrine that a member of Congress "must do as he is told—or else" and said that under it "Congressmen might as well send their power of attorney to some bureaucrat in Washington. There is no need of going personally."

Another development in the O'Connor case was issuance of an open letter by Louis David Hopkins, Republican leader of the Twelfth Assembly District, north, in New York, urging Republicans to support O'Connor. He said he believed O'Connor entitled to the Republican nomination "because he is responsible for defeat of the Roosevelt reorganization bill, which checked the New Deal. He said that if the G. O. P. nominates O'Connor "his election is assured, Roosevelt's purge fails and the New Deal forces with their ally, the Communist-controlled American Labor Party, are routed."

Meanwhile, interest here centered in expected action today by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee with regard to new disclosures from its investigators in the angry senatorial primaries in Tennessee and Kentucky.

The committee, under chairmanship of Senator Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, already has heatedly denounced "schemes and questionable devices" it has encountered in the Tennessee fight, and is expected to make public today or tomorrow additional facts since unearthed by other investigators rushed into the state. It may also have ready for publication the expenditures-contributions report of Senator George L. Berry, Tennesse Democrat, who is engaged in a grim struggle against the Ed Crump-Senator Kenneth McKellar coalition backing Tom Stewart for Berry's seat.

New telegrams were sent Friday to Berry and other Senate candidates who had not filed their fund report with the committee.

Four Vote Tomorrow.

Another who was cautioned by wire to supply the committee with such information was Senator Barkley, Senate leader, engaged in an equally hot fight with Gov. A. B. Chandler of Kentucky, who has denied Presidential support for Barkley in his determination to come to the Senate.

The Tennesse primary voting is Thursday, that in Kentucky Saturday.

Tomorrow four States will vote—Virginia, Kansas, Missouri and West Virginia. Chief interest here in the Kansas election is in the race of the Rev. Gerald Winrod for the Republican Senate nomination. Charged with fostering religious and racial intolerance, Winrod has seen the national chairman of his party, John D. M. Hamilton, and numerous ministers, urge his defeat at the primary.

Clark in the Clear.

In Missouri Senator Clark appears to have the Senatorial nomination virtually assured, since the struggle between Gov. Lloyd Stark and the Tom Pendergast machine is centered on a judgeship election within the state.

The drive to unseat Representative O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, has crystalized in announcement by Mayor LaGuardia of New York that Byrne MacDonald, first deputy city welfare commissioner, would have his support in the race. MacDonald will run in the Republican and Democratic primaries, probably as an American Labor Party candidate, and also as an independent in the general election if he should lose in the primaries, he has said.

Better Business Bureau Chief Says 'We're Beautiful Suckers'

JOSEPH W. MARSHALL.

Director Joseph W. Marshall Runs Down All Schemes to Defraud Washingtonians; Declares City Is Mecca for 'Get-Rich-Quick' Ideas.

By Christine Sadler

To fly-by-nighters with sucker schemes up their sleeves Washington is the mecca of meccas. Pickings do not always measure up to expectations, but—despite 16 years of increasing activity by the Better Business Bureau—they are comparatively good. The scene shifts so rapidly that "consumer education" is difficult. And then the climate seems to be right for it. Residents who were pillars of staidness back home are willing to buy mineral rights to almost anything just as soon as they become Washingtonians.

"We're beautiful suckers," declares Joseph W. Marshall, director of the Better Business Bureau, which during the past year investigated 3,899 complaints about investment projects and 10,809 in the merchandising division.

Cemetery lots guaranteed to give the investor a tremendous profit within a few years, "oil lands" in Oklahoma and Texas, "free lots" almost anywhere, farms that can be operated from a fireside—are but a few of the things Washingtonians thought they had bought.

The year's most colorful "get-rich-quick" scheme, Marshall thinks, was the $5 chain letter plan which flourished beautifully until the bureau collected evidence on it for the district attorney's office.

"There are really very few new racket ideas. Most of them are but variations of some old scheme," Marshall declares.

"Charm lessons are among the most popular modern schemes in the District. Persons attending are often subsequently solicited to buy stock in a charm correspondence school. Religious cultists and health quacks have found "free lectures" still the most lucrative entre for building up groups of gullibles who will gladly pay real money for "advanced lessons," the BBB says.

"Before you invest—investigate!" the Better Business Bureau uses as its slogan. "Facts About Furs." "Facts About Jewelry." "Facts About Savings." "Facts About Borrowing." "Facts About Oil Royalties," are names of factual booklets which it has distributed by the thousands.

Protection for the legitimate merchant, who suffers as much from false advertising of his competitors as does the customer taken in by it, is one of the real services rendered by the bureau. The big increase in the number of establishments holding themselves forth to the public as having storage accommodations for winter garments, for instance, cut a big slice from the trade of the honest-to-goodness storage firms. The BBB has found that a number of the firms so advertising themselves actually have no proven or actual facilities for such service. "Much work still remains to be done in this field," Marshall says.

Marshall, a native of Washington, has been with the Better Business Bureau two and a half years. He started work in the advertising department of Woodward & Lothrop, traveled to Philadelphia to become assistant advertising manager at Wanamaker's, returned to Washington to have that same title at the store where he started. Then he signed up with the BBB.

The bureau needs just about all the contacts available, and Marshall makes them by "joining." He belongs to many organizations, the Junior Board of Commerce. He is married, has a 4½-year-old son, and estimates that 75 percent of the investment frauds perpetrated in the District of Columbia are launched by transient salesmen who have tried to milk other cities first.

On Wednesday—Leonard P. Steuart, grand master of Masons of the District of Columbia, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Air Globe-Girdler In N.Y. Unheralded

New York, July 31 (AP).—A leisurely, 'round-the-world air passenger, Capt. Hans Bertram, of Germany, now only 5,500 miles from his goal, Berlin, slipped into town from San Francisco today unheralded and unacclaimed.

He plans to take off tomorrow at 6 p. m. (Eastern standard time) in the German catapult plane Nordwind for the Azores to continue the flight he hopes will make him, he said, "the first man to go around the world on scheduled heavier-than-air planes only."

Negro Primary Vote Studied In Deep South

Tenn. Colored Democrats Organize; Banned in Two States.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, July 31.—Negro participation in Democratic primaries, rare in the deep South, engaged the attention today of party officials in three Cotton Belt States with heated senatorial campaigns—Arkansas, Tennessee and South Carolina.

Approached on the subject of relaxing restrictions imposed in reconstruction days, Democratic committee executives of South Carolina and Arkansas said flatly party rules excluded Negroes from voting.

Arkansas Democrats will vote August 9, and South Carolinians August 30 in primaries which virtually assure the nominees of victory in the subsequent general elections.

Political futures of Senators E. D. (Cotton Ed) Smith, South Carolina New Deal critic; Hattie W. Caraway, of Arkansas, and George L. Berry, of Tennessee, were at stake in multiple-entry races.

Cole L. Blease, former Governor and Senator, opened the question of Negro voting in South Carolina with an observation he was "reliably informed" approximately 8,000 had enrolled over the State. Blease seeks the governorship again.

Secretary Lane L. Bonner replied party rules provided no Negro could belong and none could enroll and if any had, their names were on the books illegally.

In former years Negroes who swore they had voted for Wade Hampton for Governor in 1876 and had white witnesses to back them, were allowed to vote in South Carolina. A few did. The provision was eliminated at the 1938 State Democratic convention.

In Arkansas, J. M. Robinson, president of the Arkansas Negro Democratic Association, asked the executive committee to revise a party rule providing "all known white Democrats" may vote. He suggested "all known Democrats."

State Chairman June P. Wooten said the committee could make no change. He recommended the association present its proposal to the State party convention in September.

Robert Buckner, of Chattanooga, Negro barber and a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the Tennessee senate, said Negro organizations had been formed in Memphis, Nashville, Chattanooga and Knoxville.

"We expect to poll heavy Democratic votes in each of the four cities," he said.

Joe Brown, former Republican Representative in Congress from Chattanooga, said many Negroes "voted the Democratic ticket in the last national election and it appears now that many more will vote the same way this year."

Farm Revolt Heads Will Widen Drive

Chicago, July 31 (U.P.).—Leaders of a farm "revolt" which spread from central Illinois corn and wheat fields to 12 States are awaiting only completion of harvest for a drive to extend their Corn Belt Liberty League to all agricultural sections.

A young Sciota, Ill., farmer, Tilden Burg, whose fields lie in the fertile basin of the Mississippi River, led the "revolt" last April against the Federal Government's crop control program and the attempt, as they described it, of the Government "to tell us how to run our business."

Succeeds Rev. L. J. Kelly, Who Goes to Jesuit Seminary.

The Rev. Henri J. Wiesel, S. J., headmaster of Georgetown Preparatory School, has been appointed pastor of St. Aloysius Church and president of Gonzaga College, succeeding the Rev. Laurence J. Kelly, S. J., who will become spiritual counselor to students at the Jesuit Seminary, Woodstock, Md., it was announced last night.

At the same time, it was announced the Rev. William E. Welsh, S. J., vice president of St. Ignatius College, Manhasset, Long Island, will become president of Georgetown Preparatory School.

Announcements were made at dinner by the Rev. William Horrigan, minister of the congregation, in reading orders from the Province of Maryland and New York.

In conformance with custom, Father Kelly and Father Wiesel, who was visiting the congregation, then shook hands and changed places at the table.

Pronounced Vows in 1889.

Pastor of St. Aloysius Parish and president of Gonzaga since September 25, 1932, Father Kelly celebrated his fiftieth year in the Jesuit Society last year. He was born February 11, 1870, in Philadelphia, and entered the Jesuit novitiate at Frederick, Md., in 1887.

He pronounced his vows in 1889 and was ordained in 1903, after five years as junior scholastic work at Loyola College, Baltimore, three years of philosophical studies at Woodstock, and four years teaching in high school.

After completing his theological studies at Woodstock, Father Kelly spent a year on the staff of the Messenger of the Sacred Heart and a year at Poughkeepsie. Then followed 11 years spent in the Southern Maryland Missions, on the Wicomico and at Leonardtown. He was called from Maryland to direct the novices at the new novitiate at Yonkers, N. Y. In 1922 he was appointed provincial of the Maryland-New York Province and was sent to Poughkeepsie as spiritual moderator in 1929. He came to St. Aloysius in 1932.

Father Wiesel, a native of Baltimore, was ordained in 1922 and served on the faculty of Georgetown University in 1916 and 1918 and previously was the principal of St. Joseph's Preparatory College in Philadelphia. He became headmaster of Georgetown Prep in 1935 while he was serving as assistant pastor of St. Aloysius Church, to which he was assigned in 1934.

Prior to his assignment to St. Aloysius he was president of Loyola College in Baltimore and was credited with expansion of facilities there.

Father Welsh was born in New Jersey in 1900 and was educated at St. Joseph's in Philadelphia. He entered the Society of Jesus in 1923 and was ordained at Woodstock in 1935. In 1937 he became vice president of St. Ignatius. He was professor of classical languages at Georgetown Prep from 1930 to 1933.

Federal Agents Probe Disorders In Lumber Field

San Francisco, July 31 (U.P.).—The Federal Government today stepped into the bitter Feather River lumber country's labor war, where a "purge" of C. I. O. lumber workers resulted in hand-to-hand fighting in the streets of Westwood, Calif., to determine whether there has been any violation of civil rights.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has been ordered to make an "exhaustive and impartial" investigation of charges brought by C. I. O. union officials that they were herded out of town at the points of guns by armed lumber company employes.

The fighting occurred July 13 when hundreds of armed employes of the Red River Lumber Co., which operates the largest lumber plant in the world at Westwood, drove about 700 men, women and children out of town.

Service Union Workers Vote to Strike Tonight

Pittsburgh, July 31 (AP).—Service workers of five large downtown department stores today voted to strike at midnight tomorrow following breakdown of negotiations for a new contract.

Union officials estimated 500 elevator operators, janitors, janitresses, porters and maids would be affected. They added the workers, members of the Building Service Employes International Union (A. F. of L), had demanded overtime pay during peak business periods and a written guarantee of paid vacations.

World War Anniversary Finds Reborn Reich a Power Again

Press Recalls Aug. 1, 1914, When Germany Declared State of Conflict Existed With Russia; Says Country More United Than Under Kaiser.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 31.—The German press recalled today the fateful August 1, 1914, when imperial Germany declared war against Russia, plunging the nation into the World War.

Editorializing on the twenty-fourth anniversary of the declaration, newspapers said the same faith which carried Germany against the world then had worked another "miracle"—a Germany reborn from ruins of the war.

The four years of conflict left Germany crippled and helpless and sank her into obscurity as a European power. But it produced the leader of the new, powerful Germany, a man destined not only to shape the fatherland into a nation more united than it ever was under a Kaiser but to unshackle every yoke the Versailles Treaty burdened it with.

Behind the swastika banner the Germans are in military step again, just as they were behind the Kaiser's imperial banner. And they are being told again they are invincible. Germany's high-geared armed force, once stripped of potency by the peace treaty, sends renewed shudders of fear throughout Europe.

The war was drawing to a close in October, 1918, when the famed German "List" Regiment from Bavaria was subjected to an English gas barrage on the Ypres front.

An unknown young corporal and dispatch carrier, Adolf Hitler, was blinded and returned to a field hospital at Pasewalk, Pomerania. The war was over for him, but its outcome was to goad him along the road toward wielding more power than any Kaiser.

The lost war filled him with determination to turn to politics and to fulfill his promise for Germany—"I can save."

It was 1933, however, before he assumed power and there had been years of suffering, revolution, warring political parties, inflation and deflation as he fought his way up.

Since 1933 Hitler has been busy wiping out the "shame" of World War Germany, a process which has brought the powder keg of the next war nearer the explosion point than at any time since 1918.

G.O.P. to Open 1940 Platform 'School' Today

Study Includes 'Courses' in Six National Issues; Report to Wait.

By Geoffrey Parsons, Jr.

Chicago, July 31. — "Summer school" for 160 members of the Republican program committee will open tomorrow on the Chicago campus of Northwestern University.

The curriculum mapped out by Chairman Glenn Frank and his aides includes courses in six subjects of national importance—labor, agriculture, relief, finance, social security and political liberty.

Men of affairs, labor leaders, professional experts and professors will be the faculty of a political school novel to America. After listening to addresses on the various subjects, members of the committee will sit down to round-table discussions at which they will present results of their own research into rank-and-file sentiment in the last six months.

No Report This Year.

Primarily, this week's meeting of the Republican program committee is to assist members in laying the foundation for a thorough-going report on national problems and a platform for their solution. The committee will not report to the Republican National Committee for some months, however, probably not until next year.

The general public will be invited to share part of the week's program with committee members. A series of evening lectures will be open.

Tomorrow night, at a session devoted to agricultural problems, speakers will be Joseph S. Davis, director of the Food Research Institute of Leland Stanford University, co-author of the Brookings Institution report on the A. A. A. and one-time chief economist for the Federal Farm Board, and John Brandt, president of the Land O'Lakes Creameries, of Minneapolis, Minn.

A. F. of L. Aide to Speak.

Programs for the remaining nights of the week follow:

Wednesday—Francis E. Rivers, colored aide to District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, on "Rackets in Politics;" J. N. "Ding" Darling, New York Herald Tribune cartoonist and president of the National Wild Life Federation; W. W. Ramsey, of Chicago, vice president of the Illinois State League of Women Voters.

To Sidestep Ire.

Friday—Herbert D. Simpson, head of the department of finance at Northwestern University and arch opponent of national pump-priming; Sumner H. Slichter, Harvard University economist.

William Hard, secretary to the program committee, will be an added feature on the Friday night program, when he will attempt to summarize the work of the week.

Saturday, Dr. Frank will broadcast an address over a national network, and it is in this address, it is expected, that he will make a sort of interim statement of principles for the program committee. The executive committee worked all day today at the Lake Shore Athletic Club drafting a broad declaration of principles which might be enunciated by Dr. Frank without arousing ire of Republican leaders who do not think the program committee should make any pronouncements which could be pinned on the Republican Party as a whole.

'Boiler Kid' Snite Marks 28th Year, 'Licks' Paralysis

Chicago, July 31 (AP).—Frederick B. Snite, jr., the self-styled "Boiler Kid," observed his twenty-eighth birthday anniversary today, confident of winning his fight against infantile paralysis.

"I've got this thing licked," said Snite, who has lived in an "iron lung" ever since he was stricken in China March 31, 1936.

"For one hour every day," he added, "I breathe with only 5 pounds of pressure. The rest of the time it is 15 pounds. It won't be long now until I get out for keeps."

Nine Are Hurt, One Badly, in Traffic Here

Youth, 19, Has Possible Skull Fracture; Boy Hiker Injured.

One man was injured seriously and eight other persons suffered cuts, bruises and bone fractures in a series of traffic accidents in and near the District yesterday.

Edmund A. Weber, 19, of Annapolis, Md., was in Casualty Hospital last night with a possible skull fracture and severe lacerations to his face. He was brought to the hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad from an accident on the Crane Highway.

Hitching a ride on an automobile at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, George Frazee, 9, 719 Thirteenth street southeast, slipped to the street. He received abrasions to his face and body, a broken nose and possible internal injuries. Physicians at Gallinger Hospital, where the boy was treated, said his condition was not serious.

A second child was hurt yesterday when she ran into the street from behind a parked automobile at 120 Fifteenth street southeast and was struck by another car. She was Nounay Washington, 5, of 1515 North Carolina avenue northeast. She was treated at Gallinger Hospital for brush burns to her right leg and cuts.

Four youths were brought to Casualty Hospital for treatment to cuts and bruises from an accident on the Defense highway. All were treated and released. They gave their names as John Leary, 15, 3327 Brothers place southeast; Benjamin SanFelipo, 17, 3311 Fifth street southeast; Joseph Hayes, 16, 2911 Seventh street southeast, and George Sugrue, 16, also of the Seventh street address.

A two-car collision at Sixth and E street northeast sent two persons to Casualty Hospital. Both were passengers in a taxicab driven by Carl C. Hansen, 28, of Takoma Park, Md. Frances G. Beall, 36, of 335 Eighth street northeast, sustained a possible fractured right shoulder and Marvin Gardner, 26, 621 Morris place northeast, received concussion of the brain and shock.

Police said the taxicab was hit by a machine operated by Henry F. Broadbent, jr., 24, 1427 Hemlock street northwest. There were no arrests made.

Lois Miller, 17, 4110 Gault street northeast, suffered cuts about the face when the car in which she was riding with Carl Wilhelm, 1620 Minnesota avenue northeast, collided with an auto driven by James R. Procter, colored, 1468 Belmont street northwest. Procter was charged with operating a car without a permit.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Reginald Stewart conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Sunday night in the seventh summer concert at the Potomac Watergate, with Marshall Moss at violin soloist. Program: Overture to "Rienzi" (Wagner), Symphony No. 1 in C minor (Brahms), Violin Concerto in E minor (Mendelssohn), "Finlandia" (Sibelius).

A cloudless sky, a crescent moon and an up-river breeze combined last night in providing ideal conditions for the enjoyment of music in the open air, and the opportunity was not neglected by the thousands of auditors who gathered in the twilight at the Potomac Watergate for the National Symphony Orchestra's seventh concert of the summer series. It was, accordingly, under the best auspices that Reginald Stewart, conductor of the Toronto "Promenade" concerts, made his first appearance in Washington and received a welcome charged with cordiality.

An authoritative director, Mr. Stewart gave evident abundance of sound musicianship in a routine program that enabled him to dispense with a score-laden desk. Intent upon faithfulness of interpretation, he was little concerned with the showmanship which seeks effects at the expense of sincerity. As a consequence of his concentration on essentials, familiar compositions were vitalized without recourse to devices of rhetoric. He has an excellent rhythmic sense and a sure feeling for the subtleties of phrase and the shadings of dynamics.

He began his program with the overture to "Rienzi," that magnificent work with which Richard Wagner strove to outdo all the extravagances of "grand" opera. As is often the case when ambition overlooks the necessity for a sound foundation, the structure collapsed under its own weight. From the wreckage not much has been preserved. The overture still serves to remind us that Wagner had to struggle long against the reputation of being nothing more than a noisy composer.

For the main fare of the concert Mr. Stewart gave us the first symphony of Brahms in a reading marked by intellectual insight and poetic penetration. Brahms can be made deadly dull by a conductor unalert to the peculiarities of his idiom and the ellipses of his thought. Mr. Stewart realizes this danger of inattention to detail, and his reading clarified every ambiguous passage.

Marshall Moss, the new concertmaster of the National Symphony Orchestra, made a pleasing impression in his debut as soloist. It had been his intention to demonstrate his electrotonic violin, an invention for the amplification of string tone, but mechanical difficulties on the barge precluded this. His performance of the Mendelssohn concerto on his Guarnieri violin was technically skillful and artistic in its refinement. His tone was suave and fluent, and his style and the impetuosity requisite for the romantic content of the music.

The concert closed with the "Finlandia" of Jan Sibelius, one of the most successful patriotic pieces ever written. In it are discernible the germs of the genius that has been fully disclosed in the symphonies of Finland's greatest composer.

2d Faces Trial In Doctor's Death

South Paris, Me., July 31 (U.P.).—Francis M. Carroll, 43, deposed deputy sheriff and World War veteran tomorrow goes on trial for the murder of Dr. James G. Littlefield, aged country physician, for which Paul N. Dwyer, 19, former sweetheart of Carroll's eldest daughter, Barbara, 17, already is serving life imprisonment.

Carroll was named as "the real killer' by Dwyer, six months after the pimply faced youth had entered State prison. In his prison-cell confession, Dwyer repudiated all prior confessions and asserted he had shouldered the blame for the crime to protect Barbara from shame and because his life had been threatened.

Recession Now Is Moral, Says Mgr. Connelly

St. Peter's Rector Speaks at Holy Comforter Church's Ground-Breaking.

"Our greatest depression and recession is not monetary or economic, but intellectual and moral," declared Mgr. E. J. Connelly, rector of St. Peter's Catholic Church, speaking yesterday afternoon at ground-breaking exercises at the new $200,000 Holy Comforter Church, Fourteenth and East Capitol streets.

"Man does not live by bread alone," he told the crowd of more than 1,500 persons, "and while governments and such institutions are of course important, there is something of far more importance—God's truth." The world is sick, he said, because God's truth has been neglected.

After blessing the site, near the present church, and turning the first spadeful of earth, the Rev. Charles R. O'Hara, Holy Comforter pastor, was followed by dignitaries of the Catholic Church, including the Rev. John Dowling, of Holy Name Church; Father Edward P. McAdams, St. Joseph's; the Rev. Remigius Fleichel, O. F. M.; Father Leo McCormick, of St. Dominic's parish and Mgr. Connelly.

Members of the Holy Name Society, the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin, and others marched in the procession which opened the ceremony. The Holy Comforter Boys' Band furnished the music.

The new edifice, work on which is to start today, will be of Indiana limestone with a seating capacity of 1,000. Fred V. Murphy is the architect and Harwood Nebel is the contractor. The building will be ready for occupancy in July 1939.

Police Aid Asked In Hunt for Boy Missing a Week

Police last night were asked to look for an 18-year-old boy graduate of Western High School, who has been missing from home since Monday when he left to meet a friend who was to take him to Brandywine, Md., for a week's vacation.

The missing youth, Phillip Cole, 1661 Thirty-fourth street northwest, was run over by a truck about a year ago and required two months' hospital treatment for internal injuries. His mother, Mrs. Annie Cole, told police he had been in poor health since the accident.

Becoming alarmed when she failed to hear from her son, Mrs. Cole called the friend whom the boy was supposed to have met and learned that she had left the city a week before for Indiana. A twin brother, Paul, said his brother had about $15 and a suitcase when he left home.

Naturalization Shows Big Gain In New Deal Era

By the United Press.

Sharp increases in the number of aliens becoming American citizens under the New Deal, apparently because of better employment prospects and to take advantage of Federal and State financial assistance, was revealed last night in reports by the immigration and naturalization service.

The reports show there has been a steady increase in issuance of final citizenship papers to foreigners since the low mark of 113,363 in the 1933 fiscal year. In 1934, there were 113,669 final papers issued. These increased to 118,945 in 1935, to 141,265 in 1936, and to 164,976 in 1937. While official reports for 1938 are not yet available officials predicted there would be a further rise.

British Canaries That Died Out 200 Years Ago Re-appear Here

Retired Navy Captain Produces Large Birds With Lilting Song as 100 Other Babies Make Debut in Ornithological Society.

Two of them, as a matter of fact, were so new that their appearance was of interest to bird fanciers everywhere. They represent the Callan Crestshire breed, which is being developed by Capt. James A. Callan, U. S. N., retired. They are produced, Capt. Callan explained, by crossing the Yorkshire with the American Hartz Mountain canary.

He has worked on the new breed for seven years and has three to go before he will produce birds which are so thoroughly Crestshires that he can count on them not to revert to the parent breeds.

The new bird has the lilting song of the Hartz and the large size of the Yorkshire. It is similar, Capt. Callan says, to a breed which disappeared nearly 200 years ago in England and has not been produced since.

The first step in the breeding process, he explained, is to mate a Yorkshire with a Hartz. Their offspring, a half-breed, is mated with a Yorkshire to produce a three-quarter thoroughbred bird. Its young in turn are mated with their parents and among themselves, so ultimately a bird with only one-thirty-secondths of the parent strain is developed.

Every fourth generation, however, one "runt" is hatched which reverts to its ancestors. The strangest case of reversion Capt. Callan ever saw was a bird with one short leg and one long leg.

The same breeding process is used to produce birds of different colors. The ordinary yellow canary may have cousins tinted blue, green, cinnamon or even red.

E. M. Jameson, owner of the canary which won fame last year for its ability to whistle "Yankee Doodle," was awarded the ribbon for the best bird in show yesterday.

88 of 25 Families In Mission Camp

Brother and sister combinations will be far in the majority when 88 boys and girls leave Central Union Mission at 9 a. m. tomorrow for a two weeks' vacation at Camp Bennett.

The child who won't have a brother or sister along will be the exception. There will be 25 sets of youngsters from the same family in the contingent—11 brother acts, five sister teams and nine brother-sister combinations.

This group, its members ranging in age from 6 to 8, will be the third to go to Camp Bennett this summer. A fourth will leave on August 16 and, depending upon volume of contributions for maintenance of the free camp, a fifth will go out on August 30.

Father Hubbard plans to cruise several hundred miles in the Arctic Ocean to complete his studies of the Eskimo language. He said he would not be in contact with civilization again until he returns to Barrow.

Safe-Crackers Get $800 at F Street Store

Yeggs Enter by Roof Door; Cab Driver Robbed of $41.

Safecrakers and street robbers were active in the District over the week-end and escaped with over $800.

The safe in the office of the Wonder Clothing Store, 1012 F street northwest, was blown open sometime Saturday night or early yesterday and $797.23 taken. A gold watch and $300 in checks were left behind.

Sol Goldberg, 1534 Upshur street northwest, manager of the establishment, discovered the burglary yesterday when he went to the shop. The money was Saturday's receipts, he said.

The yeggmen broke through a trap door on the roof of the building and apparently worked on the safe unhampered. The door was blown off and police said the job was the work of experts.

Tyrus S. Fowler, 24, 1111 Fourteenth street northwest, a cab driver, was robber of $41 and his taxicab early yesterday by two men at Sixth and A streets southeast.

Fowler told police the men hired him at Fourth and G streets northwest and asked to be driven to southeast. At Sixth and A streets, one of the men pointed a gun at Fowler while the other went through his pockets. They escaped in the cab after forcing the victim out.

Grabbed from behind and threatened with a pocket knife while walking at Eighth and P streets northwest, Hall Brooks, 1522 Eighth street northwest, had $5.20 taken from him by three colored men.

Mrs. Peter Hill, Life Resident Of District, Dies

Was Descendant of Landed Proprietor of D. C.; Rites Set Wednesday.

Mrs. Peter Henry Hill, 84, a life-long resident of the District, died yesterday at her residence, 2730 Thirty-fourth place northwest, after an illness of several years.

Born at the home of her parents, Gisboro Manor on the Potomac, Mrs. Hill was a direct descendant of Notley Young, one of the landed proprietors of the District of Columbia. Some of her ancestors landed in Maryland in 1633.

She was a member of the National Society of Colonial Dames and took an active interest in affairs of that organization.

She is survived by eight children, Mrs. Charles B. Dunn, of this city; Mrs. Charles Astor Bristed, of New York; Mrs. Richard Dana Skinner, also of New York; Mrs. Harry G. Meem, with whom she lived; the Rev. Mother Rosalie Hill, Superior Vicar in San Francisco; the Rev. Mother Teresa Hill, Newton, Mass.; the Rev. Mother Elizabeth Hill, of Torresdale, Pa.; a son, Peter Henry Hill, of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Eugene A. Jones.

Funeral services will held Wednesday at 10 a. m. at the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, Twenty-seventh street and Woodley road northwest.

Hour-Long Parade To Greet Corrigan

Dublin. Associated with Naulty, who represents the Pioneer Airmen and the Early Birds of America, are James Conlon, president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians; Andrew I. Hickey and Michael Casey of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, and State Deputy Thomas F. Carlin of the Knights of Columbus.

A glance at the program for the day makes it clear that Corrigan won't have a chance to indulge in the "compass" trouble at which he attributes his landing on the isle of his ancestors.

Hour's Parade Planned.

He arrives on August 8 at 10 a. m., accompanied by Maj. Ernest Jones of the Early Birds. After an ovation timed to last half an hour, he will be escorted to Mt. Vernon by an extentive motorcade supervised by Darrell Preston Aub, district manager of the American Express Company, with the assistance of Frederick J. Kyttle.

Washington proper will greet the flier at the Lincoln Memorial plaza, starting point of an hour-long parade through the city. The scheduled line of march encompasses Constitution avenue, Capitol Hill, Independence avenue, Pennsylvania avenue to Ninth street, Ninth street to F, then to Fifteenth, Pennsylvania avenue to Seventeenth street, Seventeenth to Constitution avenue and up Fourteeth street to the Willard Hotel.

After a 1 o'clock luncheon at the hotel, Corrigan will visit the District Building for Commissioner Hazen's official welcome. He also will call on State Department and Commerce Department officials and drop in at the Smithsonian for another look at Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis, which he helped build.

To See Flight Films.

The itinerary then calls for an hour's relaxation at the Willard, supervised by watchful members of the reception committee.

The National Press Club will give a dinner for the Irish-American pilot at 6 p. m. at the club. A reception by Robert Brennan, acting minister of Eire, will be tendered at a time to be decided.

Eight-thirty will find him and the committee at the Capitol Theater, where Carter Barron will cut off the regular show in order that Corrigan may see for the first time newsreel pictures of his flight. A supper dance at the Mayflower will close the festivities.

On the reception committee for the ancient order of Hibernians are Joseph A. Daly, Rossa F. Downing, Martin J. Dufficy, Patrick H. O'Day, Frank J. Rafferty and Daniel Donoghue. Representatives J. Burwood Daly, of Pennsylvania; William B. Barry, of New York, and Kent E. Keller, of Illinois, comprise the Congressional committee, on which Senators David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts; Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Harry Byrd, of Virginia, also have been invited to serve.

Other Pioneer airmen on the committee are Roy Knabenschue and Joseph V. Martin. John A. Remon, of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., and Harry Somerville, of the Willard Hotel, also will take part. Commissioner Hazen's committee includes Col. Dan I. Sultan, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, W. T. Meredith, Chief Charles E. Schromm of the Fire Department and Maj. L. R. Lusby.

Father Divine on Parade

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Here's Father Divine, self-styled "God," as he rode in a parade through Harlem yesterday. To demonstrate "the work of Father Divine," approximately 2,500 of his followers took part in the gay procession. The cult leader was resplendent in a pepper and salt suit, panama hat and tan and white sport shoes as he acknowledged the applause of his marchers and spectators.

U. S. Accuses D. C. Physicians Of Monopoly in War on GHA

Health

"Recent studies by Government technicians have brought out the fact that the 40,000,000 persons in families with annual incomes of less than $800 cannot pay for medical care and in many cases do not receive it when they are in need of it."

But, he added, "the department is not in a position to decide whether or not co-operative health associations are a proper solution. Its function is rather to prevent artificial impediments by organized groups who desire to escape competition from various attempts which may be made from time to time to bring down the cost of medical care."

Says Crime Not Implied.

Arnold pointed out an indictment for violation of antitrust laws does "not necessarily charge a crime involving moral turpitude. Thus, in the present case the department does not take the view that the offenses committed are crimes which reflect upon the character or high standing of the persons who may be involved.

"The absence of moral turpitude, however, does not lessen the duty of the department to prosecute where it believes violations have occurred."

He held out an offer of peace to the medical associations by saying, "In the event that voluntary co-operation results in constructive proposals going beyond the elimination of illegal practices, the department will adhere to its previously announced policy of submitting such proposals to the court as a basis for a consent decree."

D. C. Physicians Expelled.

It is believed Arnold in that language invited the District Medical Society to reinstate Dr. Mario Scandiffio, expelled for affiliation with the G. H. A. and also invited dropping of illegal-practice charges against Dr. Raymond E. Selders, medical director of the G. H. A. clinic, pending before the Harris County (Tex.) Medical Society for his affiliation with G. H. A.

The department takes the position, Arnold said, that monopoly practices should not be employed to prevent what may be "an illuminating experiment" in co-operative medical care.

"The G. H. A. seems to provide the opportunity for such an experiment, since it is composed of Government employes (about 2,500) of general similarity of health, income and working conditions, and occupies a field in the Nation's Capital where close observation may be made of the results and adequate publicity given to any conclusions," Arnold declared.

Calls "Monopoly" Illegal.

"The department believes that the antitrust laws make it illegal for medical societies or individual practitioners in the District to obtain or retain for themselves a monopoly of the community's medical services, so long as adequate standards are maintained in the treatment of patients among those doctors who are willing to serve co-operative groups.

"No combination or conspiracy can be allowed to limit the doctor's freedom to arrange his practice as he chooses so long as by therapeutic standards his methods are approved and do not violate the law.

"Organized medicine should not be allowed to extend its necessary and proper control over standards having to do with the science and art of medicine, to include control over methods of payment for services involving economic freedom and the welfare of consumers and the legal rights of individual doctors.

"There should be free and fair competition between new forms of organization for medical service and older types of practice, without the use of organized coercion or illegal restraints on either side.

"If the newer forms of organization should result in inferior standards of therapy, as is feared by their medical opponents, that fact can be revealed only by experiment.

"It is hoped that this proceeding will lead to cessation of such practices as have been alluded to, with the result that there may be free and fair competition between the new forms of organization and the older types of practice."

Dr. Fishbein Silent.

Chicago, July 31 (AP).—Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of The American Medical Association and spokesman for the organization, declined to comment tonight on the announcement by the Department of Justice that a grand jury investigation of "organized medicine" was to be made. Dr. Fishbein indicated an official statement might be issued in a day or two.

52 Die in Jamaica.

Kingston, Jamaica, July 31 (AP).—Physicians, nurses and railroad men worked feverishly tonight amid the debris of the worst railroad wreck in the history of the West Indies to extricate the bodies of the 52 known dead and to aid the 75 injured, all victims of a tragedy late Saturday night. Only eight persons of tht entire five car trainload were believed to have escaped unhurt.

The wreck occurred when the front engine of the crowded train was derailed and the engineer of a rear locomotive unknowingly rammed the five passenger coaches into the derailed engine.

For hours, splintered coaches lay in a river bed before cranes could reach the isolated, mountainous scene about a mile from the Balaclava Station, 70 miles northwest of here.

Acetylene torches were being used to cut away debris in a search for other victims.

The 52 known dead included the fireman and driver of the front locomotive and two other trainmen. It was feared, however, several casualties who were taken to hospitals in grave condition would die.

Derailed on Curve.

The five-car train was jammed with holiday crowds, both city people going into the country and country vacationists returning from visits to Kingston.

At Montegobay, 50 miles from Kingston, a second engine was attached to the rear to help take the train over 20 miles of steep grades near Balaclava.

Unaware of the accident ahead, the driver of the rear locomotive kept up full speed. He drove the front engine over an embankment, killing its crew.

The tender mounted the engine, and the baggage car immediately behind was driven parallel to them. The pile-up forced the first coach over the embankment and into the river. It was demolished and every occupant was killed or injured.

The second coach crumpled and the third coach piled on top of it. By this time he rear engine had slowed down. The fourth coach was badly damaged, but the fifth coach remained on the rails intact.

Straw Ballot Shows Rep. Smith Is Heavy Favorite Over Dodd

The Post instructed its correspondents to call approximately 30 persons in their territories, picking the names at random from the telephone book. Here were the results:

Arlington County—Smith, 15; Dodd, 14; noncommittal, 2; undecided, 2; not entitled to vote, 1.

Loudoun County—Smith, 26; Dodd, 4.

Forecasts Differ.

The results of the poll were, in some respects, far out of line with the forecasts of Dodd supporters, particularly with respect to Alexandria. For that matter, they were out of line with forecasts by the Smith people, who thought that, in some cases, they were too flattering.

E. C. Davison, of Alexandria, former mayor and general secretary of the International Association of Machinists, said the labor vote was solidly against Smith.

"The labor people are angry with Smith," Mr. Davison said. "In attacking the C. I. O., he apparently is trying to group all labor with C. I. O. He knows there is no C. I. O. votes in the district."

Gardiner L. Booth, chairman of the Eight Congressional District Democratic committee, predicted that Smith would carry Alexandria and the whole district by a substantial majority.

Charles T. Jesse, treasurer of Arlington County, predicted that Dodd would be "humiliated" by the vote in that county. He predicted further that Smith would carry every precinct in the 15 counties, save possibly one.

Thomas R. Mechem, of Lyon Park, a member of the Democratic County Committee, predicted that Dodd would carry Arlington County by a good majority.

The Post's Fairfax correspondent, in reporting the results of his poll, said that about half of the Dodd voters "are voting for him because they admire Roosevelt; the other half because they don't like Smith."

The Loudoun correspondent forwarded the following comment from persons to whom she talked in making the poll:

"The conservative people of Loudoun will give Smith the majority. The people of Loudoun are tired of the New Deal."

The Charlottesville correspondent, covering that city and Albemarle County, reported that of the five pro-Dodd voters he encountered, three were railroad workers. And one of these, he said, laughingly admitted that his wife would vote for Smith.

Clean Sweep Seen.

"Prominent resident of Ivy said Smith would make almost a clean sweep of that section, despite claims of Dodd headquarters."

From Culpeper came this report: "A prominent lawyer says he is sorry, but he really believes that Dodd will get a few votes in the county."

The Warrenton correspondent said that the general opinion was that Smith would "walk away with the election."

The two candidates, reaching the end of the most furious campaign nearby Virginia has known in half a century, rested yesterday, Judge Smith at his Alexandria home and young Dodd at Round Hill. Today and tonight, Dodd will be back on the radio sounding his battle cry that "a vote for Dodd is a vote for Roosevelt." In a speech over WJSV at 6:30 p. m., Dodd will answer five questions posed for him Friday night by Smith. He will close his campaign with a speech over the same station at 10:30 p. m.

Smith also is expected to make a radio speech tonight.

Muzzle Raccoon? Police Uncertain; They'll Ask Advice

Washington police last night said they will confer with the corporation counsel to determine whether Poogie, a pet raccoon, comes under muzzle regulations for dogs.

Yesterday Poogie and her two baby raccoons were out for a stroll with their owner, Robert Yokum, 131 C street southeast, when Poogie bit 5-year-old Percy Ruffner, 116 North Carolina avenue southeast.

Yokum told police a crowd of children were crowded about the pets when the Ruffner child apparently stepped on the raccoon's tail. Poogie turned and bit the boy on the thigh.

3,000 Trail Divine In N. Y., Results Truly Wonderful

New York, July 31.—Father Major J. Divine, the Harlem cult leader who acquired a 500-acre estate across the Hudson from President Roosevelt's Hyde Park home Friday, staged a parade and mass meeting for his followers yesterday and the result, he said, was "truly wonderful."

Nearly 3,000 of his followers trudged through Harlem and the Bronx in the afternoon.

Tennessee's Political Stage Set for Trouble This Week as Climax in Bitter Primary Fight

Memphis polls Thursday. But there will be guns and bayonets and brickbats and rough tempers at hand, and no one can be found who prophesies absolute calm.

The picture of the State's political situation in the final moments presents some of the most fascinating contrasts in National politics today. The next Senator from Tennessee, to succeed Senator George L. Berry, is almost certain to be the man who directed the prosecution of the famous Dayton "monkey trial"—Tom Stewart, the man who strove in vain to keep William Jennings Bryan from taking the stand for that spectacular grilling by Clarence Darrow on whether a whale really swallowed Jonah.

Stewart is a Crump candidate, which has always been tantamount to election in Tennessee. The wiseacres here see no reason to change this view.

Opposing him is the amazing Berry, 54 years old, the millionaire printing pressman who once slept, worked and cooked his meals for five years in the pressroom of the Jackson, Miss., Daily News.

Consider Berry a moment. An orphan at the age of 6, when his father, a deputy sheriff in Poor Valley, Tenn., was killed from ambush by moonshiners, Berry was repeatedly adopted throughout the Middle West and as repeatedly sent home.

He was 16 before he could read and write, but this quiet, self-effacing, honey-voiced man, who tiptoed delicately through the Senate corridors last session, never raising his voice in debate and almost never voting on anything, rose from the deepest obscurity.

Union Head 31 Years.

As a pressroom roustabout he traveled by degrees to San Francisco, hurried to the Nevada gold fields, won the national lightweight boxing amateur championship, administered a scientific beating to miners in Nevada who considered him a sissy because he didn't drink the scorching mine-camp whiskey, was sent in 1907 as a delegate to the national convention of the International Printers and Pressmen's Union; made such an eloquent address there that he was unanimously elected president, and has held that post without serious opposition for 31 years.

Invented Color Press.

Now Berry is a multimillionaire. Inventor and sole owner of the original five-color printing process, his plant at Pressmen's Home, Tenn., prints the millions of variicolored cigarette packages for all the major companies. He is president and sole owner of the International Playing Card Co. He owns three newspapers, is a controlling director in one bank and a stockholder in another, owns 12 farms in east Tennessee aggregating 20,000 acres, and a 7,000-acre farm in Trigg County, Ky., which was paid for by crossties cut from his oak trees.

Every night he says his prayers. No depression has ever touched his money-making ability. He lost the Democratic Vice Presidential nomination to Charles W. Bryan in 1924 by three votes. He knew Franklin D. Roosevelt before the latter went to the New York Legislature. He was Wilson's appointee as industrial co-ordinator with the Allies in 1918, and it was his idea that has resulted in the present superb international labor board at Geneva.

He supports 48 pressmen's widows rent-free for life on his farms, has a turreted castle filled with Oriental rugs and French tapestries, has never lowered a man's pay nor lengthened his hours in his life, and has built up such a strong union that today throughout the United States and Canada there is no single daily newspaper of importance without a unionized pressroom. Yet there have been but two major pressroom strikes in 30 years, and Berry quashed both of them and hounded their instigators out of the business.

The third Senatorial candidate is J. Ridley Mitchell, now a U. S. Representative, the man who succeeded Cordell Hull in the House Big, bald, affable, a great mixer, his greatest regret, he says, "is that I haven't four hands to shake hands with." Mitchell's political career began when he was 12 years old, and had no presentable shoes and stockings. Entering a school oratory contest, wearing his mother's shoes and stockings, he made such a stirring oration against the demon rum that he won the silver first prize medal by aclamation. His father bought him footgear next day and Mitchell hasn't been headed since. His only Congressional stands are against nepotism and crime.

Browning, the dynamic Governor who is struggling with Crump for control of the State, is a husky six-footer, 12 years a Congressman, 48 years old, an artillery captain in the World War—he was almost killed in the last 15 minutes before the Armistice when the Germans opened an unexpected bombardment. He made his way up from waiting on tables at Valparaiso College, Indiana, through farming and school teaching into the greatest threat to Crump supremacy in 30 years of Tennessee politics.

McKellar Crump's Ally

Cooper, 5 feet 5 inches tall, 42 years old, graduate of Vanderbilt, Princeton and Harvard, rose through American Legion politics. He is studious, immaculate, dignified, a non-drinker, and grows such a heavy black stubble that even twice-a-day shaving isn't enough.

Cooper, Stewart and W. H. "Pete" Hudson, campaigning for utilities commissioner, are the Crump candidates. Browning calls them sarcastically, "the three blind mice."

Behind it all, considering the national stake in the elections, is Browning's long-standing enmity toward Senator Kenneth D. McKellar, the Senate's patronage emperor. Throughout the 12 years Browning was in Congress he received only minute driblets of patronage. McKellar took it all, Browing complains even now. McKellar's term expires in 1940, and Browning has long had his eye on the seat. If Browning could win, this year could perfect a State organization, he believes. But McKellar has worked with Crump for so long, and has given such good service, that their unanimity aginst a man they consider an upstart is not surprising.

Gandhi to Undergo Two-Months' Yogi Health Treatment

London, July 31 (U.P.).—The Sunday newspaper The People said today that Mohandas K. Gandhi, Indian nationalist leader, will undergo a two-months' rejuvenation treatment in an effort to regain his health.

Gandhi will take the ancient Hindu Yogi kaya kelp treatment at the hermitage village of Ghaziabad, 20 miles from Delhi. According to The People, the treatment will be administered by Raja Vaidya Anand Swami, 40-year-old master of arts at Punjab University.

He will live for 60 days in an underground cell with daily newspapers as his only companions. He will drink only orange and lemon juice and three times daily will receive the kaya kelp medicine, consisting of avala fruit juice, honey and the essence of an Himalayan herb known only as anand, three times daily.

'Suicide' Army Stalls Japan's Hankow Drive

Two Divisions Decimated; China Reported Using 'New Foreign Guns.'

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Monday), Aug. 1.—Chinese forces under "the ever victorious" Gen. Chen Cheng, hurling themselves at Japanese lines with suicidal recklessness, today appeared to have checked the Japanese drive on Hankow south of the Yangtse in a srries of smashing counterattacks.

Japanese reports admitted the drive westward from Kiukiang was "at a standstill," but said the Chinese had suffered tremendous losses, including the virtual decimation of two divisions that attempted a counterattack

Japanese Mopping Up.

The Japanese military spokesman said the Chinese attack at this point, which lies below Kiukiang on the Yangtse, had been repulsed and that Japanese columns were "mercilessly" mopping up east of Hukow.

Southwest of Kiukiang the Chinese said they had entrenched themselves at the foot of Lushan Mountain, where they blocked the Japanese drive under the personal direction of Chen Cheng.

North of the river, however, the Japanese said their drive from Taihu in a diagonal direction southwestward across Hupeh Province toward Hankow was "progressing satisfactorily." They insisted they had occupied Susung, while Chinese reports said the city was being hammered from two sides by Japanese artillery but still was holding out.

Chinese Use New Guns.

The Japanese drive below the river was halted 14 miles west of Kiukiang, according to Chinese reports, although Japanese planes continued bombing Yangtse ports and the Chinese rear as far as Hwangkang, 30 miles east of Hankow.

The Japanese said the Chinese had new "foreign guns," including anti-tank guns, tanks and heavy artillery, which was being concentrated in the sector between Kiukiang and Hankow.

Chen Cheng ordered his men to tear up bridges and highways and dig tank traps to impede the Japanese advance. Several floods were unleashed from the swollen Yangtse, further miring motorized Japanese units.

Soviet Denies Hill Fell to Japanese

Tokyo

Red Army Ready.

Ten miles outside Moscow hardened Red Army soldiers underwent training, running in gas masks and carrying rifles with fixed bayonets over a course several miles long.

Japan's refusal to accept a Russian protest concerning the latest frontier incidents has left the situation without an approach to a settlement, officials indicated, and this appeared to be the probable reason for tonight's official silence.

Last Friday the Soviet charge d'Affaires in Tokyo, Constantin Smetani, filed a formal protest at the Japanese foreign office but officials there declined to accept it, asserting the Russians clearly had violated Manchukuo territory.

Thus, it was explained in Moscow, the situation consists of charges and counter-charges with no immediate approaches to a settlement.

Russians Driven Off.

Tokyo, July 31 (U.P.).—Japanese and Russian troops fought a 12-hour battle today over a disputed hill at Changkufeng, according to a Domei (Japanese) news agency report which said the Russians were driven off and the "entire area" was occupied by Japanese and Manchukuo troops.

The Japanese claimed the Russians had attacked with infantry and armored car units, but had been driven back with 200 casualties, including 30 bodies left on the battlefield.

The reported outbreak brought Soviet-Japanese relations to the most acute tension in recent weeks, and War Minister Lieut. Gen. Seishiro Itagaki immediately visited Prince Fumimaro Konoye, the prime minister, to discuss the incident.

It was understood a full cabinet meeting has been summoned for Monday to decide upon future steps in the crisis.

British Troops Kill 8 Arabs in Jordan Valley

Palestine Strife Casualties for July Total 201 Dead, 473 Hurt.

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, July 31. — Mobile troops killed eight Arabs and wounded many others today when the soldiery encountered a roving band in the Jordan River Valley as Jewish-Arab clashes for the twenty-sixth successive day kept the Holy Land in ferment.

Casualties for July totaled 201 killed and 473 wounded. Dead included 141 Arabs and 60 Jews, and wounded included 303 Arabs and 170 Jews.

Haifa tonight was heavy with tension when a bomb was tossed into a cafe but without inflicting any injuries.

Dead and wounded for the month alone exceeded all losses in the sporadic disorders for the entire year of 1937.

It was believed if the situation became worse British authorities would be obliged to declare martial law.

Even with the arrival of expected troop reinforcements in September it was feared authorities would not be able to end the trouble which has assumed almost the proportions of a civil war.

The British commission headed by Sir John Woodhead to study the plan to divide Palestine into three parts, Jewish, Arab and British prepared to leave for England Wednesday after three months work. It was boycotted by the Arabs.

Spaniard Present, Italians Refuse to Talk in Esperanto

Cecil Goldsmith, secretary, declared the action was the result of participation of a representative from Barcelona, Government Spain.

However, 1,700 delegates from 30 countries, including the United States, gave a great cheer when delegates followed each other to the platform. Germany was not represented at the conference to discuss problems of the international language, Esperanto.

War-Scared Europe Diplomats Start Vacations, Stall for Time

Situation Tenser Than at Any Date Since July, 1914; Daladier Hails 'Cordial' Agreement With Britain After Royal Visit.

By John Elliott,

Paris, July 31.—Summer political holidays in Europe began this week-end with the diplomatic situation tenser than this continent has known at any time since the historic July of 1914. Last week the British Parliament adjourned for its summer vacation, and today the curtain came down on the French political stage until next autumn, when the annual "celebration in honor of the wines of France" took place at Avigon in the presence of President Albert Lebrun and Premier Edouard Daladier.

As the statesmen of Europe prepare to go to the seashore or the mountains and try to forget the cares of government, there is much talk about a "detente" and an "easing of the international situation." But it is hard to see any concrete facts which justify this profession of optimism.

Viscount Runciman has undertaken a mission to Prague in an endeavor to mediate the well-nigh irreconcilable differences separating the Sudeten Germans and the Czechs, but obviously he is being sent out by the British government with a view to gaining time. It is estimated that he will be in Prague for at least two months, and, if he can keep the Germans negotiating and discussing for that length of time, it will then be autumn—too late to begin a war this year, and peace will have been saved, at least, until next spring—provided, Chancellor Adolf Hitler does not upset the apple cart in the meantime.

According to information available in diplomatic quarters in Paris, the German military preparations will be so far advanced by the end of August or the beginning of September that Hitler will be in a position to make a coup in Czechoslovakia then, if he deems the time propitious.

One outstanding factor making for peace in these troubled days is the Anglo-French entente, which has been immensely strengthened by the popular success of the King and Queen of England here. This element of European stability was duly noted by Daladier in his speech today at Avignon's historic Palace of the Popes.

"Since the conversations in London in April and the visit of the sovereigns in July, our agreement with Great Britain has become closer and more cordial," the Premier declared.

Britain to Extend Big Loan to China

London, July 31 (U.P.).—The British government's credits department contemplates a $50,000,000 or $60,000,000 credit to China for nonmilitary purchases, with the government guaranteeing 75 per cent of the risk to manufacturers and exporters, it was learned tonight.

The plan was projected as result of the cabinet's recent rejection of proposals for a direct cash loan to China.

Interest rates on credit purchases of nonmilitary capital goods, including materials for railroad and communications construction, would be fixed at 5½ per cent.

Last Buggy and Whip In Store's Stock Sold

Pittsfield, Ill., July 31 (AP).—The B. A. Campbell Store here sold the last of its "new" buggies yesterday—part of a carload bought 15 years ago.

Tony Smith, who has yet to buy his first automobile and claims the horse and buggy give better transportation, was the proud purchaser. Smith also bought the last buggy whip in stock and was disappointed at not finding a linen duster to complete his outfit.

Loyalists Rush Aid for 20,000 In Rebel Trap

Franco Claims 1,500 Foes Wiped Out; Insurgent Lines Are Cut.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, on Spanish Frontier, July 31.—The loyalist "people's army," led by leathery General Vicente Rojo, today slashed through insurgent lines protecting Fayon, gateway to Saragossa province in eastern Spain, in a desperate effort to save 20,000 comrades from encirclement and slaughter.

Fighting in intense heat the loyalist sought to beat back Generalissimo Francisco Franco's counter-offensive around Fayon and prevent it from reaching shell-ruined Gandesa, 16 miles south along the Ebro valley.

Four divisions of the government's international brigades and the Lister and Campesino Communist units continued assault on Gandesa in the center of a 28-mile curving front but were slowly being driven into a trap by Franco's reinforcements that swung down the Ebro valley from the north before Rojo's thrust at Fayon.

The four divisions of 20,000 men, their munitions and supplies nearly exhausted because Franco flooded the Ebro and wiped out the pontoon bridges at their rear, were unable to make headway against Franco's Gandesa defense line because of rear-guard fighting.

Insurgent headquarters at Saragossa reported one entire detachment of 1,500 men was surrounded and wiped out on the west side of the Ebro. Another battalion was trapped in a ravine and annihilated.

So intense was the suddenly-shifted government attack on Fayon, which controls communications in all directions, that Franco was said to have rushed up strong detachments of African Moors to replace Italian "Black Arrow" units.

After breaking the Fayon lines and threatening to encircle the town, the loyalists advanced northward with Mequinenza, another insurgent base 10 miles further north, as their objective.

The outcome of the government's Catalonian offensive appeared to rest on whether Rojo's attack on Fayon, putting him firmly on insurgent soil in Saragossa, can draw off Franco's encircling operations against the foreign brigades stalled outside Gandesa.

Paris, London Pact Held Key to Peace

Avignon, France, July 31 (AP).—President Albert Lebrun and Premier Edouard Daladier today hailed co-operation of France and Great Britain as a sure guarantee for the peace of Europe.

"Franco-British friendship is the rock on which peace will be constructed to last through perhaps many more tempests and shocks," Lebrun declared in a speech at a local banquet.

Daladier said "redoubtable obstacles which were before us have been overcome."

The School Building Grant.

After 14 years, some hope develops that the District school building program may move out of the blue-print stage. In 1924 school authorities drew up a detailed five-year construction schedule, but it was soon abandoned when Congress failed to make the necessary annual appropriations. For the next decade or so, the schools worried along on a bare subsistence basis. Then, two years ago, another attempt was made to convince Congress of the wisdom of an integrated building program. But instead of the $4,024,000 needed for the first year's plans, Congress allowed only $1,540,000. Similarly, last year when approximately $4,500,000 was requested, a bare $1,569,000 was appropriated.

The PWA, however, has just allotted $1,038,000 for school construction in the District. With this, some better progress seems to be assured for the lagging five-year program. Under the terms of the PWA plan, 45 per cent of the money to be received by the schools will be in the form of an outright grant to the city. Welcome as this may be to taxpayers, it is ironic to compare it with the financing arrangement which would have taken effect if Congress had granted the sum by regular appropriation. In recent years the Federal Government's contribution to the District has represented only about 10 per cent of the local budget. Thus, the city would have paid some 90 per cent of the school construction costs instead of the 55 per cent required under PWA procedure.

The comparison is pertinent because it emphasizes the fumbling manner in which Congress acts for the District. Permitting the Federal Budget Bureau to veto the recommendations of local officials, Congress denies itself a fair and complete view of the District's needs and problems. Until some better formula is developed for control of the local budget, not only the schools but every District institution is likely to suffer.

A Good Talking Point.

The earnings record of the railroads for the first half of the year provides them with strong arguments to support their demands for a cut in wages.

Net operating income for the six months amounted to only $70,000,000, an annual rate of return of 0.67 per cent on their property investment. For the corresponding months of 1937 the net operating income totalled $299,000,000 and the rate of return, 2.84 per cent. After payment of interest charges but before dividend payments, the roads as a whole showed a net deficit of about $175,000,000 as compared with a net income of $36,000,000 during the same period last year. Sixty-one roads failed to cover expenses and taxes out of earnings.

Obviously this disastrous showing cannot be advanced as an excuse for paying starvation wages to employes. But when wage rates stand, as they do, at record high levels, and when other means of effecting substantial operating economies offer little prospect of relief, moderate wage cuts provide the only feasible and reasonable alternative. That organized labor has not benefited from its insistence upon maintenance of high wage rates in the past is shown by the steady and rapid shrinkage in numbers employed. If economies in operating costs cannot be achieved by paying slightly less to all employes, they will undoubtedly be secured in the future as heretofore by dismissals.

In other words, some employes, instead of receiving slightly less will be deprived of the opportunity to earn anything at all.

Putting Aesop To The Test.

Despite their reputations, the young are not always inconoclastic. Rather they tend to adopt the attitude supposed to be characteristic of the citizens of Missouri. They want to be shown. And being shown they may develop into traditionalists rather than idol smashers.

For instance there is that sprightly organization, the Boys' Athletic League of New York City. Like all other boys they had been subjected to Aesop and his fables. But the say-so of the famous Greek writer of the Sixth Century, B. C., was not enough for them. They decided to put his findings to the test. In particular they sought to discover whether Aesop was right in suggesting that a slow-moving tortoise endowed with determination would win in a race with a swift-footed but overconfident hare.

Probably to their amazement Tuesday's race between the two animals sustained Aesop's conclusion. The tortoise beat the hare. Yet he won not because he plodded along, as he was represented as doing in the fable, but because he was oblivious to his surroundings, while the more sensitive hare was scared into immobility.

In other words, Aesop's tale was correct but under modern conditions his moral seems to be wrong. There must be a new moral in this somewhere.

Labor Unions Under The NLRB.

Under the Wagner labor relations act the NLRB is empowered to "decide in each case whether the unit appropriate for the purposes of collective bargaining shall be the employer unit, the craft unit, plant unit, or a subdivision thereof." This being determined, the law provides that a majority of the employes in each unit may select representatives to bargain for all employes belonging to it.

Few people seem to realize the extent and significance of the discretionary powers thus lodged in the National Labor Relations Board to influence the character of the organized labor movement in the years ahead. Its power to select the appropriate bargaining unit enables it to retard or hasten organization of plants and to foster industrial unionism at the expense of craft unionism or vice versa.

Suppose, for instance, a company operates several plants—some with a majority of trade union employes and others with few or none. A decision decreeing that the bargaining union shall embrace employes of all the plants would enable the NLRB to bring non-unionized plants into a larger bargaining unit representing a majority of all employes.

Then there is the difficult question of how to organize an individual plant in which a certain proportion of the workers are skilled and better paid, definitely distinguishable from the rank and file. Shall this small group be organized into a separate craft union, recognized as an appropriate bargaining unit, or shall it be absorbed into a single industrial unit representing all classes of employes? So many different factors have to be taken into account in reaching decisions in cases of this sort that no single simple rule of action is feasible. Certainly the NLRB has seen fit to use its discretionary powers to hand down rulings showing no evidence of conformity to a set pattern.

Effective administration of the Wagner act, which would have been extremely difficult under the most favorable conditions, has been made much harder by the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. split over the issue of industrial unionism. Whenever the NLRB renders a decision favorable to either faction, it is promptly accused of bias by the other side. The latest outburst comes from the A. F. of L. because of a decision voiding the contract of an affiliated union and ordering the company concerned to bargain with a C. I. O. group.

Without being in possession of all relevant facts it is obviously impossible to pass judgment upon the reasonableness of this particular NLRB ruling, or the justification for the general charge that the board deliberately discriminates against the craft unions. The latter allegation has been denied by Chairman Madden who testified some time ago that a majority of decisions in controversial cases had favored the A. F. of L. In the case now at issue, the NLRB claims that the company interfered with C. I. O. organization efforts by encouraging employes to join the craft union prior to execution of the voided contract.

Right or wrong, partial or impartial, however, the NLRB cannot make decisions involving a choice between bargaining units without affecting profoundly the future course of the trade union movement. The ruling in the case of the Serrick Corporation, dissolving an A. F. of L. craft union in favor of a larger C. I. O. group, may have been justified in the light of the evidence presented. But even so, it has the effect of depriving a skilled group of craftsmen of the right to organize and bargain separately with their employers. What the NLRB regards as the appropriate bargaining unit is, under the law, accepted as such. If in its judgment, a craft union is not desirable in plants with a predominant number of unskilled production workers, the board may lawfully decree its extinction.

If this country had a strong united labor movement these vexatious questions of appropriate bargaining units could be settled by labor itself. As it is, labor leaders are awakening to the fact that in the Wagner labor relations act they have fostered legislation likely to deprive them of the power to shape the organization policies of the future. Eventually, perhaps, instead of blaming the NLRB, they will turn their attention to the act itself with a view to limiting the vast powers which have been so heedlessly conferred upon an untried administrative agency.

Cult Of The Alps.

From a valley in the Swiss Alps not long ago four young men could be seen through telescopes as they clung in desperate embrace to the precipitous Eigerwand, or Wall of the Ogre, not far from its yet unconquered summit. Then great curtains of cloud descended and they were lost to the eye. Inside those clouds a storm was snarling, and around the four adventurers the loosened rocks were raining down.

They might, thought the veteran guides, have a fighting chance to live it out and return. In 1931 the late Brothers Schmidt spent such a night safely lashed in standing position against the cruel North face of the Matterhorn. This was possible because of a relatively modern mountaineering gadget, the piton, whereby the ropes may be anchored to a ring at the end of a steel shaft thrust into the rock.

But throughout the next two days the Eigerwand sulked behind the storm clouds. The guides shook their heads. Nobody had ever bearded the Ogre from that side and nobody ever would. This, they calculated, made thirteen who died attempting it. But at nightfall, the four young men appeared like specters out of the snowstorm. At four, that afternoon, they said, they had reached the summit!

Now that they have done it, what does it mean? What is the mystic ideal which beckoned them upward, and has beckoned so many whose bodies are still hidden in the icy pockets of the Alps? Only those who have it can ever hope to know. "Words," confessed an inveterate Alp climber, "will never give me the fingers to feel nor eyes to see what is offered by the rocks and snow."

But who can really share the secrets of the Alps? In tourist pensions one still may hear strange, seventh-hand tales of oddly garbed warriors and even elephants that have been seen in mysterious gorges—casualties of Hannibal's army, still incorrupt in the glacial ice! Other tales concern the body of the romantic young Lord Francis Douglas, who with three others of the famous Whymper party of 1865, fell to death in the descent from the summit of the Matterhorn. Only his belt, a boot and later a sleeve were recovered. Like others he found in the Alps a monument more lofty and a tomb more secure than the pyramids.

The Pope And Mussolini.

In contrast with the situation that has obtained in Germany almost from the beginning of the Hitler regime, relations between church and state in Fascist Italy have on the whole been very amicable.

That has been particularly true since the signing of the Lateran accord in 1929, which restored to the Pope the temporal power he had lost at the time Italian unification was completed in 1870 and guaranteed the church's rights in the field of religious education and social welfare. There can be no question that the Lateran accord has worked far more satisfactorily than has the Vatican's 1933 concordat with Hitler.

This happy situation now threatens to be changed, perhaps radically. The adoption by Mussolini of the racist philosophy expounded by Hitler and put into practice in the Third Reich with a thoroughness and cruelty that have shocked the world, constitutes a challenge which the church has courageously refused to ignore. On several occasions the Pope has been outspoken in his condemnation of racism.

On July 21, he pointed out that "catholic means universal, not racist or separatist." And last week returning to the same theme he said: "No, not separatism! We do not wish to separate anything in the human family. We regard racism and exaggerated nationalism as barriers raised between man and man, between people and people, between nation and nation . . . It is forgotten that humankind, the whole of humankind, is a single, great, universal human race. All men are, above all, members of the same great kind. They all belong to the single great family of the living." And the Supreme Pontiff expressed his wonder that Italy should have felt the need to imitate Germany.

To Mussolini all such talk about the universal human race transcending all differences between men is seditious. Mussolini, says the legend plastered on 10,000 Italian walls in giant letters, is always right. The Italians may not have been Nordics until now; but since he has decreed it, Nordics they now are. To dispute it is to challenge the omniscience and the omnipotence of the Duce.

So on Saturday Mussolini said, in language reminiscent of his challenge to the League of Nations at the time of the Ethiopian dispute, "I wish you and every one to know that also in the race question we will go ahead."

Recently Fascist authorities threatened that the Vatican's attack on racism will be followed by an attack on Catholic Action. This indicates the direction toward which the conflict between church and state now appears to be heading.

In this particular, too, Mussolini, despite his loud boast that fascism does not imitate "anyone or anything" may take a page out of Hitler's book of persecution. Hitler's teacher has become his disciple.

The only way to keep fools from driving 90 miles an hour: Stop manufacturing cars that will run 90 miles an hour.

A Bad Example.

From the Minneapolis Tribune.

Dr. Chevalier Jackson, inventor of the bronchoscope, has successfully removed 50,000 extraneous objects from the insides of little folk at the Temple University Hospital in Philadelphia. But because he is a firm believer in the old adage which declares that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," he is retiring from active practice to devote himself to a campaign to keep children from swallowing foreign matter.

As a beginning in the educational process, Dr. Jackson is lecturing before groups of adults on what he considers the initial cause of the trouble—the examples of carelessness set by grown-ups. Children watch their elders holding pins, buttons and the like in their mouths, and are quick to imitate them with what often prove to be disastrous results, he tells the members of mothers' clubs, nurses' association and similar organizations.

So far Dr. Jackson's preventive campaign is in its early stages and his talks are necessarily delivered to a limited number. But it is to be hoped that his success as a safety educator will be as far-reaching as his fame as a skilled practitioner and inventor. The habit of using the mouth for a pin cushion and general utility pouch should not be a hard one to break in adults once its unpleasant consequences are recognized. Bronchoscopes are on hand in most localities, but it would be far less agonizing for both parents and youngsters if the demands for them were not so frequent.

Health Dilemma.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am very much interested in the organized effort that is now being made to improve the present system of medical care, and the plan of compensation therefore.

The present problem is the result, in my humble opinion, of a lack of understanding on the part of the public. Society naturally thinks negatively rather than positively. It thinks in terms of poverty, disease, and crime which are our great social negatives. The public seems to be convinced that the solution of the health problem centers around the development of more effective care of the sick, economic as well as medical. It must be apparent that if the medical profession were able to furnish perfect medical service for every individual, the public health problem would not be solved. This, of course, is an ideal to be strived for, but as has been said, it is not the most important health problem, and while Dr. Fishbein declared our principal needs were "food, fuel, clothing and a public with adequate wages," yet it must be apparent that these would improve, but not solve the problem. While they are, of course, essential, yet the health of that part of society which enjoys all these advantages is far from being what it should be, notwithstanding they enjoy the best possible medical care. As a matter of fact a study of the morbidity and mortality ratio among the physicians themselves would prove very enlightening.

It is a very serious question what the effect of the attainment of the objectives of the Group Health Association (which would supply medical care and spread the cost equally) will be upon the morbidity of the group. The activities of the association will not improve the health conditions surrounding its membership, neither will they tend to encourage a more intelligent understanding of the effect of diet and exercise, or a greater willingness to practice the principles involved, all of which are unquestionably the most essential factors in the development and maintenance of health. ### New Deal Propaganda?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Judging from some of the stuff, editorially and otherwise, that has been appearing in The Post for some time past, it looks as if The Post has gone New Deal, or is at least trying to carry water on both shoulders.

For example, in The Post of July 29 is an article on a speech delivered by Woodrow Wilson before the Virginia Bar Association in 1897, which is manifestly New Deal propaganda.

The writer heard the speech, and is confident that no such implications can be ascribed to it as is implied in the article in question. Furthermore, the writer knew the Wilson family, and Woodrow quite well, having, as a law student, sat under his lectures for three months. While there were some things about him I did not admire, and many of his ideas with which I did not agree, there was no one who was more thoroughly wedded to democracy and to our form of government than he; and knowing him as I did I am sure that were he alive today he would condemn out of hand everything the New Deal has done or attempted to do.

His entire character and background together with his knowledge of history would have made it impossible for him to have approved of the measures of the New Deal, which have been condemned and discredited by innumerable historical precedents. There are laws of nature and of economics as unchanging and immutable as moral laws, which no emergency or other conditions can alter, but New Dealers haven't yet found it out. Two and two make four, and have done so from the beginning of time, and will continue to do so, the New Deal to the contrary notwithstanding.

"Doctrine Of Scarcity."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If, as Mr. Wallace is reported as having said in Des Moines on July 27, "for more than seven years this Nation has been cleaning up the mess caused by the speculative extravagances of the 20's," how long will it take to clean up the mess—still being extended—created by taking from such persons as are taxpayers and "paying" out of such proceeds to other persons to prevent and destroy production?

What advantage, if any, is there in disjointing the whole economic system? There are those who can take clocks apart and who cannot reassemble the pieces in any way which will run.

Underproduction may exist not only with respect to ultimate consumer requirements but with respect to a whole economic system. A deliberate curtailment of production not only means far fewer agricultural laborers employed, but it means less goods per person among those to whom the goods are distributable, and higher prices to consumers—taxpayers. It also means lessened employment at every stage through which the goods are to pass—less carloadings, less gross earnings for railroads (though politicians insist on maintaining fixed charges) and (as is very evident) in many present instances no net earnings at all.

The "doctrine of scarcity" not only drives men out of work but it requires those who are left in productive industry to support those thus rendered "surplus" and (if employed at all) employed in large measure in fantastic endeavors to keep them occupied.

To what end? The perpetuation of our "benefactors" in power?

And Now Mr. Barr.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In 1932 I had a brainstorm. I voted for Mr. Roosevelt of the $100,000,000 New York Deficit Roosevelts. Ever since a brain expert has been working on me to figure out why. Let me deny any such claptrap as the clownish NRA and AAA (in emasculated form still with us) were advocated by me in a letter to which Mr. Coleman, of Arlington, takes exception.

The "five months" of my weighty approval were "when action replaced inaction." Any sufferer through recent radio gems will know which period, for in them it was fulsomely rehashed for the benefit of the dupes. But back there, many will recall, public adulation turned heads. Brains tossed off cellophane wrappings. Plans tripped on the heels of plans. Pledges were shattered, and the shattering officially minimized. Oh, yes, my friends, a new era!

True, something detracted. The New Deal let the country drift deeper into the bank crisis by refusing to co-operate until the spectacular March 4, 1933. Now it brags of the crisis it accentuated!

Under the New Deal there's been too great pressure for ideas that create bad times and then needlessly prolong them. I'm willing to dilute that "abysmal failure" charge on one condition. Let someone point out to my dumb understanding (since Mr. Coleman has not done so) the worth of a victory or mandate which leaves in its wake 12,000,000 workless, a flood of alibis for "abysmal failure" and a debt the effect of whose steady rise cannot be computed. And red-hot advocacy of the New Deal in face of facts does not alter the facts.

I was far from suggesting Franklyn Waltman's "incompetence." I simply conceded he was swamped by numbers and faced odds in bucking the same "money power" of government that buys the votes. Need I go beyond recent Congressional refusal to vote politics out of relief?"

I also deny that the gullible, whose blind confidence it abuses, gave the reigning party sanction to pull off the dizzy stuff the Deal has pulled—which seems a little shadier, a little worse, than anything the much cursed Liberty Leaguers at their worst ever pulled.

Three Yellow Stripes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noticed in The Post this morning an article from the American Automobile Association objecting to the three yellow stripes painted on the curbs by the District Traffic Bureau, calling it a "paint saving policy" and stating that motorists didn't know what the marks are for.

In view of all the publicity given the recent ruling about parking 20 feet back of the building line, any motorist with an ounce of sense realizes what the yellow marks mean. Unlike the AAA, I think this traffic regulation a good one, as drivers can now have a clear view of the intersection they are approaching, and I see no reason for not fining those who park too close to the corners.

The GHA And The Doctors

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The motive behind the G. H. A. movement would seem to be altruistic and worthy of consideration, that of providing necessary medical care for those unable to pay for such services. However, any system which regiments individuals, while it may produce a form of security to the masses, also reduces them to the complacency of bovine life. Instead of developing initiative and will-power, the individual becomes a mere human gadget, "plugged in" to any doctor's office or clinic with which the association desires to connect him, without liberty of choice perhaps.

The employe who pays a stipend each month into an organization to insure himself against neglect and suffering during times of illness can certainly have very little personal interest in the physician assigned to his case, even if allowed to do his own selecting from the medical personnel of the organization. Likewise there is no reason why the physician should or could feel any particular interest in the patient.

There is no doubt that for a certain element—those who can never see anything but the dollar sign—organizations, such as the G. H. A., will be of material interest; but to those who measure life's values by something vastly greater than silver and gold, this particular brand of organized philanthropy does not make the strongest appeal. Unfortunately our present generation seems to be shirking responsibility where possible, measuring the finer things of life by dollars and cents, and unwilling to "put its own house in order."

There is a close sympathetic bond between patient and doctor—mutual confidence and trust, which cannot possibly exist between an employe and physician of some organized health group. The very presence of the doctor, as he enters the sick room of his long-time patient, inspires the patient with courage and hope. And what of the doctor? Without thought of gain he gives of his time and talent, the benefit of his scientific knowledge for which he has paid enormous sums, without even the thought of recompense from his patient. Sometimes the account is never entered on his books. Why?—the personal equation, admiration and friendship built up between physician and patient—something for which no organized body can compensate.

To those who have been accustomed to their "family physician," through a period of many years, this regimentation in the medical profession would seem catastrophic. There is something of vastly greater worth than mere relief from pain or the doctor's fee involved—something superbly grand and beautiful, an eloquent power of soul that regimentation will automatically destroy. Lack of personal interest in "just another patient" will not inspire selfless service which the world so sadly needs.

Inside Stuff.

"COME, now, what is the real dope on Roosevelt? Is he going to run for a third term?

It was Uncle John talking. Somehow I had known that he would ask that question. And I had had a hunch he was going to ask quite a few more if he had a chance. That's why I had hesitated about stopping over at the "old home town" during my vacation. I was as anxious to get away from politics as I was the Washington heat. Uncle John has a phobia for wanting to know the "inside stuff." He isn't happy until he knows all the dirt that goes on behind the scenes.

Naturally, I did not know the answer to Uncle John's question. It had popped out just as we finished dinner and I hedged a little. I would rather enjoy Aunt Lucy's coffee, anyhow. But my admitted lack of knowledge did not stop Uncle John.

"Come, come," he repeated, "you newspaper boys know the answer. Suppose it was given to you off-the-record, it won't go any further than this room."

* * *

This was new to me. And I guessed that I must be ostracized because if any other newspapermen knew the answer they haven't told me and furthermore every newshawk in the Capital would give his right or left arm, depending on which he signs his check with, to break the story first. I tried to explain that there are hundreds of newspapermen, correspondents, and magazine writers in Washington and that all of them cannot drop into the White House for a chat with the President, and that the only time I see the Executive Mansion is from the street car while on my way to and from work.

"Well, perhaps," Uncle John agreed, "but you boys get together and swap stories. I know. It isn't like the movies and old times, anymore, when the reporters would almost slit each others' throats for an exclusive story."

I allowed as how maybe it isn't like the movies anymore. But this wasn't my idea of "getting away from it all," but what could I do? I decided to try another angle.

"The consensus of opinion . . ." I began meekly, hoping to show Uncle John that any statement concerning a third term is merely personal opinion based on conjecture.

"Never mind the consensus," my uncle cut in, holding up his palm like a traffic cop. "There is a definite answer and you know it. I can see why you fellows don't print all the stuff you hear, if it is given off the record, but I can't understand why you should be so secretive in private among friends."

I was getting nowhere fast and more impatient by the minute. Just where he got the impression that every Washingtonian is in on every inside Government move and that there is a conspiracy afoot to keep that news from the rest of the country, I don't know.

* * *

I paused to light a cigarette and made another start. "It is really too early to make any prediction on a third term. I believe the President himself doesn't know just what he will do."

Uncle John wouldn't be sidetracked. "Well, then what is your personal opinion as to what he will do . . . judging from present conditions and so forth . . .?"

I could see that Uncle John figured I would draw my opinion from some supposedly concealed information. And I played right into his hands. "Even to guess is hazardous," I ventured. "There have been many mentioned as his successor, but there doesn't seem to be any really strong man ready to step . . ."

"Oh, then he is going to run again," my triumphant uncle nodded knowingly.

That was the final straw. "O. K., then he is going to run again, but don't quote me on it," I sighed resignedly.

I hoped this would satisfy Uncle John and the subject would be dropped so we could talk of where the fish were biting best and where was the coolest pub in town. I was mistaken, though. Uncle John was not through yet.

* * *

"Isn't it true that Jim Farley is really the President and that Roosevelt is just a front?"

"Farley," I said, "is an important man in the Administration, but . . ."

"I thought so. Now how about the story that Ickes throws darts in a large map of the United States while blindfolded to determine where PWA money will go?"

"Well, I had . . ."

Uncle John turned to Aunt Lucy. "See, Lucy, what I have been telling you? There are things going on in Washington that the rest of the country doesn't know anything about. But you get one of those newspaper lads who isn't afraid to talk and he'll give you the inside dope."

Eavesdropping.

In order to eavesdrop, a man must be out of doors. He must be within the eavesdrop, or eavesdrip—the space of ground which is liable to receive the rainwater thrown off by the eaves of a building; and it must be a comfort to any confirmed eavesdropper that nowadays nearly every eaves has (not "have"—eaves is a singular noun) a gutter under it to keep him dry. For all that, his lot is not a happy one; and now that the law has begun again to drop upon eavesdropping, most eavesdroppers may be expected to drop it.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

In San Antonio.

ALL cockeyes, as left-wingers are called in the baseball business, will be bound to recognize that Paul Kilday, of Texas, has received a mandate from the people of this district to give them right-wing service in Congress. Our cockeyes have been insisting that when the people elect a man they give him a mandate. The people elected Mr. Kilday over Maury Maverick, the left-wing incumbent who had received the blessing of the Administration and very substantial financial assistance as well. Paul Mallon reports that one week before Mr. Maverick went to the post against Mr. Kilday the Housing Administration allotted $3,588,000 for slum clearance in the foreign section of San Antonio.

The defeated statesman reports in his own story of the campaign that this section voted for him, although such precincts usually were carried by the machine. He means, of course, the opposition machine, it being understood that the New Deal is not a machine but is compared of starry-eyed, altrustic patriots in politics with no notion of organization. He carried the Mexican and Latin-American vote, usually controlled by the machine with its sordid politics, coercion and bribery, after the New Deal had tossed in $3,588,000 to buy these constituents' new homes.

On the other hand the degraded Americans of the silk-stocking precincts who used to support Mr. Maverick voted against him this time, and he explains that these rather inferior—the American Americans, as distinguished from the admirable Mexicans and Latin Americans—were too stupid to consider the issues.

Not a single national issue was discussed, he relates, and the American Americans, the ignorant cattle who live outside the foreign slums and educate their families, turned on him to outvote the superior, intelligent patriots of the Mexican and Latin-American sections. These idealists were influenced by neither the $3,588,000 nor the inflammatory orations of a Mexican woman Communist orator doing her bit for democracy in San Antonio, although Mr. Maverick says that "she really raised a big ruckus."

"All of which," says Mr. Maverick in conclusion, "brings to my mind that the decent-thinking people of this country," including, of course, the Mexicans and Latin Americans and, in New York, the Puerto Ricans and Russians, "had better get red-hot for the liberals who still have races."

• • • •

MR. MAVERICK puts the silk-stocking Americans, with their low American social and moral standards, outside the class of decent-thinking citizens, such as his Mexicans and Latin Americans, and perhaps he has them right. He is a Texan and should know his own neighbors and whether they think decently or not. But however indecent their thinking, it will have to be admitted that they have the right to vote and that when their votes elect an opponent of Mr. Maverick that opponent acquires a mandate.

The problem plainly is one of education. The American Americans have a high resistance to the superior ideals and political standards of the Mexicans and Latin Americans of the San Antonio slums and, unlike the Mexicans and Latin Americans, they have a low resistance to bribery.

Mr. Maverick says the right wing, or anti-cockeye organization, spent more money than had ever before been used in a Southern Congressional campaign, which would argue that their slush fund topped $3,588,000—an excessive price for one seat in Congress.

• • • •

ALL THIS is terrible, but we have to be patient and let such people go to the polls and suffer occasional setbacks when their mass ignorance and opposition are aroused and they nullify the enlightened vote of their betters. And Mr. Maverick will annoy only such non-Mexican, non-Latin-American and nonradical trash and stiffen their opposition to progress and reform by public assertions that opposition to the New Deal in any quarter is evidence of indecent citizenship.

He refers to Roosevelt-haters among them, which is a loose term, tinged with an assumption that it has somehow become despicable and un-American—if not, indeed, ground for disqualification at the polls—to oppose President Roosevelt's policies and methods. Yet, he says, they "kept mum as oysters," giving us to believe that, as in Germany, anyone who keeps mum and does not "heil" the leader thereby expresses hatred for him ad does not deserve well.

The Mexicans and Latin Americans of Mr. Maverick's following will have another chance two years hence to hand a mandate to a candidate committed to the proposition that the American Americans of the district cannot think decently.

New Yorker And Carolinian Consider The South Today

"It is my conviction that the South presents right now the Nation's No. 1 economic problem—the Nation's problem, not merely the South's . . .

"Suffice it for the immediate purpose to get a clear perspective of the task that is presented to us. That task embraces the wasted or neglected resources of land and water, the abuses suffered by the soil, the need for cheap fertilizer and cheap power; the problems presented by the population itself—a population still holding the great heritages of Kings Mountain and Shiloh—the problems presented by the South's capital resources and the absentee ownership of these resources, the problems growing out of the new industrial era and, again, of absentee ownership of the new industries. There is the problem of labor and employment in the South and the related problem of protecting women and children in this field. There is the problem of farm ownership, of which farm tenantry is a part, and of farm income. There are questions of taxation, of education, of housing and of health."—President Roosevelt in a letter to the Conference on Southern Economic Conditions, July, 1938.

"As a Southerner . . . I ask only that they (the Yankees) recognize the poverty of the South as a part of the same civilization as Harvard and in a measure as the creation of the same people.

"A good deal more is necessary for the Southerners. Item one is escape from pretentiousness. The Southerner has deluded only himself . . . Maybe still one Reb can beat ten Yankees. It is irrelevant. But planning in the South must begin at the bottom where so many of its people are. There is no handle on its top by which it can be lifted. Tyranny, like that of Huey Long's, would be swifter. Government by an oligarchy of plutocrats might possibly provide a more orderly way, though it would be concerned with profits first and people only afterward, not recognizing that there is a difference. But in the South the tyrants and the plutocrats and the poor all need teaching . . . All are in the warm dark, and whether they like it or not—white man, black man, big man—they are in the dark together. None of them will ever get to day alone."—Jonathan Daniels in "A Southerner Discovers the South" (Macmillan).

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Not so long ago, this column discussed the possibilities of the average sovereign citizen winning a job among the vast network of potential jobs in the vaster Federal service. The subject was approached academically and with the frank statement that we were not familiar with the finer nuances of the art. Having had no practical experience at all, we could only speculate.

And the hour seemed ripe for a discussion, at least. The big cities and open hinterlands of America are loaded with youth, men, women, and some children who pine for Treasury checks and the fat jobs they hear the Government affords.

More and more their visions are full of lush opportunities in Federal offices, in offices where (they blandly think) are six or eight golden cuspidors, a brace of pool tables, a pretty blonde stenographer and a clock entirely indifferent to its watchers comings and departings. Such a fantastic picture is in the minds of thousands. And individually and collectively they long for the delights of Uncle Sam, employer.

We tried, in the recent article, to say how difficult it actually is to get any sort of paying job at all here. Indeed, it is difficult to get any job at all. You hear loud talk about their taking on thousands here and spending millions to take on thousands there—but try and get on! No one is arguing that some aren't getting on, but how they do it continues a mystery, that familiar sweet mystery of life. If your Congressman knows all the words and the alto parts of the melody, then that is neither here nor there.

It is simply insisted that the average guy doesn't know how it is done—and the average guy's confusion is shared by us. We've had experience now.

• • • •

An acquaintance of ours, of enough cherished standing, wrote from the hinterlands that he was coming to Washington to get one of those fat Federal jobs. He had a great batch of stationery from his Congressman and several political big wigs in his native heather. He wrote that the matter would be one of selection, but, undoubtedly, there would be a place to suit his notions, an outlet for his training and talents and a pay check commensurate with his services. We read the missive and were filled with gloom. For no one wants to see disillusionment come starkly and disappointment to one's friends can become a pain to one's own self (as we shall demonstrate.)

The gentleman arrived, in due course, armed with the popular notion that he would take a pick of office, southern exposure and the degree of blonde for his dictation. We told him frankly that he was likely to get neither office, blonde nor job. He answered with a wave of his Congressman's letters. We warned him that he'd better take the Congressman along, too, because Congressmen's letters aren't any good. We told him that sometimes the Congressmen write a gracious word on their visiting cards and arm the constituent job seeker with these. But the visiting cards aren't any good either.

The only thing that will do the trick is a personal appearance of the Congressman before the hiring agent, not the Congressman in the spirit, but the Congressman in the flesh. And then he will have to act not only sincerely about the matter; he may even have to become demanding. All this our friend refused to believe. So he set out in the heat of the day.

He was a sensible fellow and a discerning one. It required only one day to show him that Washington is not falling over itself to hire people. He learned that Washington is hiring very cautiously, with some regard for the job-seeker's needs, some regard for the job-seker's capabilities, and a trifle of regard here and there for the good old congressman. He saw that his notion of workless jobs was a myth—and he got to wondering how long it might take for his talents to be served through the orderly and sensible channels of the Civil Service Commission.

He considered it would take some time. But the delights of Washington were too alluring to leave post-haste. So he continued on the rounds of the quick-hiring places, standing in long lines, filling out applications and giving himself genuinely and with abandon to the places of the night. After a week of fine revelry, in which neither he nor acquaintance slept, he conceived the notion that the WPA should establish a project under which he would tour the nation lecturing on the subject: "There aren't any jobs in Washington."

He figured the project would be of tremendous public service by exploding sundry unfounded myths and might turn people to the Civil Service where they belong anyhow, if they want a government job at all.

He asked that his experience be publicized, for the good of other Federal job-seekers who are scraping up enough money to come here, and who stand the chance of getting nothing for their pains but a long letter from the congressman and a ferocious hangover from the periods of forgetfulness after the congressman's letter doesn't work.

Debt of a Nation

By Ernest Lindley

How Heavy Is Federal Burden?

Several important facts concerning the national burden of debt were emphasized by Secretary Wallace in his Des Moines speech. While the debt of the Federal Government has been increasing for eight years, total debts of States and localities have not increased, and the volume of private debt has contracted. As a result the total debt burden of the United States is now $6,000,000,000 less than it was in 1930. Mr. Wallace concluded that "the debtor position of the entire United States today is stronger than at any time since the early twenties."

Mr. Wallace recognized that an orderly and discriminating expansion of debt goes with economic improvement. The enlargement of the Federal debt during the last few years has been a result of the failure of private debt to expand through new investments.

• • • •

THE IMPRESSION has grown that the growth of the Federal debt means that the Nation is being saddled with a back-breaking burden. Disregarding other aspects, including the fact that this is an internal debt which is owed to ourselves as well as by ourselves, how heavy is the Federal debt? In themselves, the figures for any kind of debt are meaningless. A debt of $100,000 might mean bankruptcy for a corner grocery store owner; it would be nothing for a large steel company. The debt of the Federal Government differs from all other debts in that it is backed by the national productive system as a whole.

Expressed in millions of dollars these are the most important markers in the recent history of the Federal debt:

|---|---|
| March 1, 1917 | $1,282 |
| Peak of war debt | 26,596 |
| Lowest point after war | 16,026 |
| March 3, 1933 | 20,937 |
| June 30, 1938 | 37,164 |

These, in each instance, are the figures for the gross Federal debt. In more than five years, Mr. Roosevelt has increased the gross Federal debt about as much as it was increased in 15 months during the World War. At the peak created by the World War the Federal debt amounted to more than $240 for each person in the United States. Now it amounts to about $285 a person—hardly a terrifying increase.

Against the gross Federal debt the Treasury held, on June 30, 1938, more than $2,000,000,000 in the general fund, $2,000,000,000 in the exchange stabilization fund, and more than $4,000,000,000 in unimpaired proprietary interest in various Government credit agencies. If these assets of more than $8,000,000,000 are deducted, the net Federal debt on June 30, 1938, was approximately $29,000,000,000. If the Federal debt should be paid off, $29,000,000,000 is the part that would have to be paid out of tax receipts.

• • • •

WHEN MR. HOOVER left office the Treasury had some assets, but they amounted to less than $3,000,000,000. On March 3, 1933, the Federal debt, minus cash on hand and other assets, was a trifle more than $18,000,000,000. So that from the time he took office in 1933 until the end of June of this year, Mr. Roosevelt had added about $11,000,000,000 to the Federal debt.

The increase in the Federal debt—whether stated in gross or net figures—is a mere bagatelle in comparison with the increase in the value of the capital assets of the Nation since March 4, 1933.

A more significant way of measuring the Federal debt is in relation to the whole national income, since it is the national income which determines the capacity of the Nation to pay taxes and support debt. According to the Department of Commerce estimates, the total national income produced in 1932 was approximately 40 billion of dollars and in 1933 approximately 42 billion dollars. In 1937 it was 70 billion and this year it may be about 60 billion.

When Mr. Hoover left office, the net Federal debt—the part that would have to be paid out of taxation—was almost half the national income. Today the net Federal debt is still about half the national income. Last year it was considerably less than half the national income. Even in this year of recession, therefore, the Federal debt is no larger in relation to the national income than it was when Mr. Roosevelt took office.

STILL MORE accurate way of measuring the Federal debt burden is by the cost of carrying it. Unless or until he is taxed to reduce the debt, the taxpayer's concern is the size of the interest charges. For this debt, which we owe to ourselves, does not have to be paid off. It can be carried forward, as Great Britain has carried her government debt for many years, with no attempt to reduce it.

• • • •

For about four years, beginning in 1919, the taxpayers had to put up approximately $1,000,000,000 a year to pay interest on the Federal debt. During the fiscal year 1924, this interest burden was shaved down to $940,000,000. Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Mellon were reigning in Washington and nobody was complaining about the Federal debt burden. During the fiscal year 1938, the total interest charges on the Federal debt amounted to $926,000,000. So the great Roosevelt debt, about which we have heard so much lamentation during the past five years, has not yet put as heavy a burden on the taxpayers as they were bearing for the five years beginning with 1919. Even the increase in the gross debt in prospect for the current fiscal year will not bring the total interest burden up to the post-war figure.

• • • •

THE COMPUTED annual interest charge on the Federal debt when Mr. Hoover left office was aproximately $700,000,000 a year. This was equivalent to about 1.66 cents of each dollar of the national income for 1933.

The computed annual interest charge on the Federal debt on June 30, 1938, was $947,000,000. The total additional burden placed on the taxpayers by Mr. Roosevelt's increase in the Federal debt has amounted to $247,000,000 a year. Interest charges on the Federal debt will amount to about 1.58 cents out of each dollar of the national income this year—if that income is $60,000,000,000.

These computations could be made with greater refinement. But, however they are made, it will be hard to escape the conclusion that, instead of being back-breaking, the Federal debt is no more burdensome now than it was when Mr. Roosevelt took office.

"He's the man that was picked to play Rhett Butler in 'Gone With the Wind,' wasn't he?"

Assembly to Start 'Open' Inquiry on Corruption in Pa.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 31 (AP).—Democratic leaders, with the State's law changed to give only the Legislature power to investigate charges against Gov. George H. Earle and 13 associates, planned tonight to have a committee of representatives begin an "open" inquiry within a few days.

There was no certainty that laws passed by a special session of the General Assembly in record time last week would halt a grand jury inquiry.

District Attorney Carl B. Shelley, Dauphin County prosecutor, in fighting for the court inquiry, is expected to appeal to the courts to try to avoid giving his evidence to the legislative committee instead of the grand jury.

Four U.S. Athletes March for Hitler In Giant Festival

Breslau, Germany, July 31 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler spent a hot Sunday reviewing a parade of 150,000 German athletes from all over the world today at the closing spectacle of a week-long gymnastic festival.

For three hours this morning, men and women gymnasts marched past Hitler's tribune. Among them were four from the United States and delegations from Argentine, Brazil and Chile.

Konrad Henlein, leader of the Sudeten German minority in Czechoslovakia, was among those who greeted Hitler when he arrived at the reviewing stand.

Books And Things

By Edward Angly

Book Of The Month.

I AM beginning to believe that belles-lettres would be a lot better off if several years in medicine and surgery were made required preparation for those who enter the practice of writing books. In the wake of the successes of Heiser, Carrel and other equally adept with microscope or pen, there now appears Dr. Arthur E. Hertzler, of Halstead, Kan., with an enthralling, entertaining, witty, philosophic and informative treatise on human nature, and the ills, real and imaginary, to which the flesh, the emotions and the divorce court are heirs.

"The Horse and Buggy Doctor" (Harper's, $2.75) is the Book-of-the-Month Club's current selection. If it doesn't become a best-seller the reading public must surely be in need of a diagnosis in the area between the ears. Dr. Hertzler, unlike most authors, has something to say and knows how to say it.

A farmer's boy, he was born on the plains in a day when smallpox was almost the only infectious disease the profession knew how to combat, when epidemics of diphtheria, typhoid, scarlet fever or even measles would terrorize a neighborhood or a county. That was in the day when people were born, operated upon and died at home, when both sides in the marriage partnership did a full day's work, when a farm boy was an economic asset to the family from his sixth to twentieth year, and when mamma didn't worry herself sick wondering whether daddy was playing around with a blonde.

BEFORE beginning his medical studies at Northwestern, Hertzler promised his father he would never refuse to attend a sick patient whatever the condition or the chances of remuneration. Except for balking at drunks with headaches, he has kept that promise. The souse, he figures, "might as well suffer from the present headache as from the one he will acquire as soon as he is relieved."

He has learned that it is not the dying but the living who suffer. "In most cases death is preceded by a dulling of the mental processes as the circulation of the brain lessens due to the failing heart. Those who die just go to sleep. Anyone who has ever become unconscious during the course of any disease has experienced the sensation of death."

No one who knows women as does the family doctor ever calls them the weaker sex, Dr. Hertzler remarks. Nearly always in cases of tragedy, he says, they stand up better than the male. In the days when a country doctor was the entire staff in his office, the doctor, without a chaperone, would help the female patient take off and put back on her petticoats, which usually numbered six, knowing full well "a patient with six petticoats had no sinister designs and, it may be added, presented no temptations. Nowadays no doctor would examine a woman patient without a woman attendant being present."

• • • •

"WE HEAR much of the moral aspects of divorce," he says. "We doctors know that the fundamental causes are physical. So long as the public makes of marriage, per se, something exalted, the problem is not going to be solved. Before kicking papa in the face and then throwing him out, go see your doctor and tell him the truth. If he survives the shock, he may be able to help. . . . He saved your child from diphtheria and he can save you from scandal, unless you are just plain cussed. He isn't afraid of anything, not even the truth."

The jealous woman, Dr. Hertzler has observed, nearly always has a faithful husband. He lists fear, hate and grief as the three great emotional causes of nonorganic illness.

With homely humor he exposes some of the pretenses and folderols of the modern city hospital, particularly operating-room practices. "Clean, rapid operating will do more to minimize infections than all the face masks ever inflicted on a docile profession. Surgeons bedeck their faces with raiment and fine linen until the operating rooms look like the pictures of an Oriental harem. The sight gives me a pain. This uncomfortable garb tends to slow operating and bungle technic, which are the parents of infected wounds."

AS A family practitioner, Dr. Hertzler has never had a case of puerperal fever, a disease which is "not so rare in the hands of specialists in lying-in-hospitals." He notes, too, that diphtheria is rare in the country, but not yet uncommon in some of the large cities.

As for the Rooseveltian lament that one-third of the people are without adequate medical care, Dr. Hertzler argues that it simply isn't so. That tearful line of conversation, he remarks, "seems to emanate from the same fount of wisdom that urged us Kansans to plow up our pasture and sow wheat, and that now advises us to put the grass back and plant shade trees and then give the land back to the Indians and buffaloes."

Awakening South

By Carroll Kilpatrick

Bibliography Of Disillusion.

Montgomery.

THAT President Roosevelt coined a striking and original phrase when he referred to the South as the Nation's "No. 1 economic problem" is not to be denied. But his thought was original chiefly in that it came from a President of the United States, born and reared in New York State. Many intellectual leaders of the South have been saying for years exactly what Mr. Roosevelt said a few weeks ago. Their books and articles and reports on the South as the Nation's economic problem now crowd the shelves of American libraries.

A brief examination of the literature of the South shows that Southern writers have been more than aware of the region's economic plight. Even many of the novels and short stories that have come out of the South in recent years have had an economic foundation. The chief concern of many Southerners has long been the economic problems peculiar to the region.

This month a new book has been added to the already long list of books on the economic and social conditions of the vast region below the Potomac. Jonathan Daniels, a native North Carolinian and editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, has written a penetrating analysis of the whole South and the 25,000,000 who inhabit it.

• • • •

IN A REVIEW of Mr. Daniels' "A Southerner Discovers the South," John Chamberlain has written:

"The big news in Mr. Daniels' book is that the South has forgotten the Civil War; there is a new issue stirring in Dixie, and that issue is Mr. Roosevelt. Where an older generation of Southerners fought over the question of Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman's taste for stolen silver, the new generations are battling over wage-and-hour legislation, AAA, and freight-rate differentials that favor the North and West."

"The materials for its shaping have grown at the University of North Carolina in a huge, wise book, 'Southern Regions of the United States.' But I believe that the new Southern plan will grow more directly from itching than from statistics. The South is awaking, scratching at new desires. A plan of course should provide the way to fulfillment and at the moment the South faces the prospect of plenty with more wish than way."

• • • •

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE perhaps to say exactly when the South pushed aside the magnolia blossom approach to its colorful story and began following the lead of the sociologists and economists. One editorial writer has said that the new approach began in 1930, when a group of Southerners, known as Agrarians, published the symposium "I'll Take My Stand." A couple of years ago this book was supplemented by the publication by Herbert Agar and Allen Tate of "Who Owns America?" Both are economic studies of the Southern States.

Just the other day Donald Davidson, a member of the Nashville Agrarian group, attempted to bring the "I'll Take My Stand" philosophy back into the limelight with his "The Attack on Leviathan," a criticism of bigness and a plea for an agrarian economy, supplemented by small industries. But it might be said that the Agrarians, however eloquent, are going unheard by the men and women now shaping the destiny of Jeff Davis' short-lived Republic.

At Chapel Hill, and elewshere, economist and sociologists refuse to be moved by the more and more infrequent shouts of the Agrarians. In answer to them, however, there have been many important books, not the least of which is "Culture in the South," a symposium edited by W. T. Couch of the University of North Carolina Press. Also there are "The South Looks at Its Past," by Kendrick and Arnett; Arthur F. Raper's "Preface to Peasantry"; "Ninety Degrees in the Shade," by the late Clarence Cason, and Gerald W. Johnson's "The Wasted Land."

Another widely heralded book on regionalism, as opposed to sectionalism, was published this year by a Texan. It is "Divided We Stand," by Prescott Webb, perhaps the most eloquent plea that has yet been made for a sane approach to the problems of the several regions on the American continent. At the heart of the argument is the assertion that economically there are divisions far more clearly drawn than even that line by Mason and Dixon.

• • • •

WHEN THE modern Southerner discusses regionalism it is seldom that bitterness or ancient anger are in evidence. The old battle of Gettysburg has been forgotten, but the battle over the tariff, the wages and hours law, the freight rate differentials are just beginning to command considerable attention. The present hearings by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the freight rates are receiving great attention throughout the South.

Everywhere there is evidence of the new issues stirring in Dixie. Even the fiction writers insist on bringing in the fact of the economic problem. Erskine Caldwell and William Faulkner have pictured it in short stories and novels. Caldwell and Margaret Bourke-White have startled the country with the tragic pictures in their collection called "You Have Seen Their Faces."

DuBose Heyward, Ellen Glasgow and T. S. Stribling have known for a long time what was the Nation's No. 1 economic problem. Other writers that should also be mentioned in this connection are John Crowe Ransom, John Peale Bishop, John Donald Wade, Clarence Poe and Frank L. Owsley.

Also of first importance are "Human Geography in the South," by Rupert P. Vance; "Forty Acres and Steel Mules," by H. Clarence Nixon, and "The Collapse of Cotton Tenancy," by Johnson Embree and Alexander. C. Vann Woodward, in his fascinating "Tom Watson: Agrarian Rebel," has presented one of the best of all the social and economic studies that have been done of the region.

Last month in New Orleans Burton Rascoe told a reporter for the Times-Picayune that "the South is practically dominating the literary scene." That may be open to argument, but it will not be disputed that the economists and sociologists are dominating the Southern literary scene.

Mrs. Farrington Fetes Musician from Toronto

Porch Party, 25 Guests, Honors Guest Conductor After Watergate Concert; Edmistons Hosts for Son and His Wife.

By Elizabeth Ford.

Reginald Stewart, Canadian musician, who was guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra at the Watergate last evening, knows what it feels like now to be a social lion. More than likely it is a very pleasant feeling, for the party in his honor was given by Mrs. Frederic Farrington—who knows how to give them—and who invited about 25 friends out to her home on Connecticut avenue to meet him after the concert was over.

Guests who arrived at 10:30 o'clock were ushered to the wide porch of Mrs. Farrington's house where supper was informally served.

Among those who were present were Col. and Mrs. Ralph Hallett, Stanley Hornbeck, Harold Allen, Lee Randall and the president of George Washington University, Cloyd Heck Marvin. Mrs. Marvin, at the present time, is out of town.

Also there were Col. Stuart Godfrey, the Misses Dorothy Robert and Jean Mara, of Princeton, N. J.; Mrs. Eugene Byrnes and her sister, Miss Jean Steier; Mrs. Herman Gasch, Miss Sylvia Meyer, harpist with the orchestra, and the manager of the National Symphony, C. C. Cappel, and Mrs. Cappel. Also invited to the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Howard and Mrs. Miriam B. Hilton.

Marlers Had Planned Fete

The Canadian Minister and Lady Marler had hoped to attend the party and had planned to give one of their own for the visiting maestro, but circumstances took them out of town so that they were not able to be present.

Mr. Stewart, for whose sake there was "no music" at the affair—to make sure that it would be a real holiday for him—is well known for his conductorship of the Toronto Promenade Symphony concerts. He has also appeared in London, and last year, revealing more talents, made his debut as a pianist in New York.

• • • •

More entertaining was done yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Theo Lacy Edmiston, who were "at home" in honor of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Theo Lacy Edmiston, jr., of Harbin, Manchuria, who arrived in Washington on July 22. They will be here for several months, although some time during the last of August they will go with Mr. and Mrs. Edmiston, sr., on a trip through Texas, Arkansas and Georgia.

The hostess was attired in an embroidered aqua blue dress, while her daughter-in-law, the former Anastasis Alexandrovna Havaeff, of Harbin, wore a striking Chinese dress of blue, embroidered with large chrysanthemums.

Among those assisting were Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. William Walton Badgely, Mrs. Lotus Van Huss, Mrs. Craig Leslie Reddish, Mrs. Charles Edward Pledger, jr., and Mrs. Paul William Ontrich.

On their way to Washington, the visitors traveled practically around the world, taking China, Indo-China, Africa, Egypt, France and England in their stride. When they leave this country, they will sail from Seattle.

• • • •

At the tea given yesterday by her parents, the First Assistant Commissioner of Patents Justin W. Macklin, and Mrs. Macklin, Miss Jean Macklin, whose engagement was announced to John F. Pearne, wore a black dress, embroidered with daisies, and carried in her arms a large bouquet of shasta daisies. Her fiance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving V. Pearne, of Los Angeles. Mrs. Macklin was in white marquisette with which she wore a black lace jacket.

Those assisting at the party were Mrs. Robert Highfield, Mrs. Brooks Setzer, Mrs. Wilson Batten and Mrs. Dwight Galt. Also assisting were Miss Margery Lynn, Miss Jennie Coan and Miss Dorothy Highfield.

The Macklins will be off for a visit to California in October and then on their return will begin preparations for their daughter's marriage. The ceremony is scheduled to take place early in December.

The bride-to-be was graduated from George Washington University last June and is an active junior member of the Congressional Country Club. She also studied at Ohio Wesleyan University.

Mr. Pearne is an alumnus of the California Institute of Technology and is now concluding a law course at George Washington University.

Arthur de Titas Are Host to Four From New York

Visiting Mr. and Mrs. Arthur de Titta at their apartment in the Wardman Park Hotel are Truman Talley, Lew Lehr, Harry Lowrenson and Jack Durrock, all of whom arrived in Washington from New York over the weekend to spend a few days here.

Mr. and Mrs. de Titta will leave Washington the last of this week for New York City from where they will sail for Europe the middle of August. Mr. de Titta has been recently appointed assistant to the Fox Movie News European Director, and will have his headquarters in Paris.

Sorority Elects Catherine Baux

Miss Catherine Baux, of the Washington alumnae of Phi Delta Delta international legal sorority, was elected third vice president at the tenth biennial convention last week in Cleveland. A large delegation of members from the local chapters attended the convention sessions.

Miss Baux is a past director of Province 11, which includes the District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and New York. She is a graduate of Washington College of Law and was a member of Beta Chapter before going into the alumnae organization.

Mrs. Mildred P. Bergeron, former first vice president, a resident of Cleveland, was elected international president of the sorority. Miss Emilie Eisenhauer was elected first vice president; Mrs. Nedra Bywater, second vice president; Miss Margaret McGurnaghan, treasurer, an office to which she was re-elected for the fourth consecutive time; S. Elizabeth Holmes, former director of this province, secretary, and Mrs. Alice Berry Sullivan, recorder.

The convention is always held at the time and place of meeting of the American Bar Association.

Interest of the Phi Delta Deltas during their session centered around their retiring president, Miss M. Vashti Burr, of Ebensburg, Pa., whose marriage to William VaHie Wittington, of Washington, took place at her home July 29. She presided at the convention and did not leave Cleveland until two days before her wedding, both she and Mr. Wittington attending the annual sorority breakfast last Wednesday morning. She was presented a handsome silver tray as a gift from her sorority sisters.

The couple will make their home in Washington.

Mrs. Wood is the former Miss Mary Louise Groot, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ellis Groot, of Arlington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wood, of Washington.

Shoppers' League Lays Plans To Help Enforce D. C. Pay Act

Spirit as Well as Letter of the Law Its Concern; Membership Rises in Year From 25 to Almost 500.

The spirit as well as the letter of the minimum wage law will be observed in Washington if the League of Women Shoppers has its way. A committee, under chairmanship of Mrs. Charles W. Collier, of Alexandria, has been meeting this summer, outlining a plan of work for next season designed to keep a check on the situation in the Capital.

Working with Mrs. Collier on the committee are Mrs. Donald Daugherty, the newlyappointed chairman of publicity for the league; Mrs. Thomas Blaisdell, Mrs. Edward Hollander, Miss Frances Rise, Mrs. Robert Huse and Mrs. Clark Warburton.

Another committee which has been busy, despite recess of the orgaization until October, is one headed by Mrs. Hollander which investigates reported labor abuses. Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, who formerly headed this group, is new president of the league. The investigating committee has been active in the last few weeks in the laundry situation.

Program Groups at Work.

Mrs. Warburton, chairman of the education committee, also has been outlining plans for the coming season. Her committee will be responsible for presenting outstanding speakers at four meetings of the league and also will provide speakers to other organizations which request information regarding the league program. When any situation arises which requires clarification, it is also the function of this department to plan a program for this purpose.

The league is only a year old, but has grown rapidly and has made its influence felt in various situations involving wages and hours of workers.

Its membership has jumped from the original 25, under leadership of Mrs. Edwin Colman, its first president, to between 400 and 500. Meetings have been held at the American Association of University Women's clubhouse and at Wesley Hall.

Club Still Independent.

Officers serving with Mrs. Ezekial include Mrs. Colman, vice president; Mrs. Edward Salner, executive secertary, who is in charge of the office in the National Press Building; Mrs. Harold Glasser, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Thomas Emerson, treasurer; Mrs. Blaisdell, chairman of the legislative committee; Miss Rice, chairman of the committee on living standards; Mrs. Robert Wyman Horton, chairman of membership; Mrs. Arthur Bachrach, Mrs. Eleanor Fowler and Mrs. Edwin Smith, members at large.

Mrs. Blaisdell last season was appointed a member of the District Minimum Wage Board, representing the public.

The Washington league, although it was represented at the May convention of the national organization, and Mrs. Collier was elected national treasurer, decided to remain an independent group pending the national board's action regarding suggested changes in bylaws. Negotiations are under way to make it possible for the Washington league to join the national.

Bachelor Girl.

"You know, Miss Brooks, I just can't understand why you haven't got married. George and I were talking it over the other night and he says, 'now some man's overlooked a mighty good bet in not marrying Sally Brooks.' And say, you'll die when you hear this. He says, 'You know, when I start looking around for my second wife, Sally Brooks is the first girl I'm going to put on my list.' . . . Yes, that's just what he said. George is an awful joker.

"But laying all jokes aside, Miss Brooks, I was really awfully surprised to find you weren't married. Someway, you don't look like a—what I mean is a woman who's never been married . . . No really you don't! George doesn't think so either. And George says he can always spot an old maid a block away.

"George says anybody could tell I was a married woman because I've got such a well-fed look. But he needn't talk. . . . with a stomach like he's got. The doctor's been after him to reduce, but you know how men are—oh no, I forgot, I don't suppose you do either. Well anyway, I can tell you this much—they're not going to put themselves out any.

"Of course though, George isn't well. He's got that arthrisis and he's got to have every tooth in his head pulled, the doctor says . . . Yes! . . . Well he just let 'em go, I suppose. You know how men—what I mean is, men just won't take care of themselves.

"What do you do with all your time, Miss Brooks? . . . Don't tell me you're that busy! . . . Well I just thought with no husband or anything . . . Well, do you have any pets? . . . You don't! I'd think you'd get so lonely . . . Oh yes, of course, I know relatives do help a lot, if you don't have too many. Now take George—he's got five sisters and three brothers besides his mother and father . . . and then a lot of aunts and cousins. You know, I'd love to have you come out sometime when they're all here together. You'd really enjoy it—a person like you living alone.

"Oh, of course, marriage has its ups and downs, but it's lots better than being alone. I know if anything was to happen to George, I'd marry again. I tell George that's one reason I guess I ought to start doing something about my hips.

"You know, though, when you get down to it, I don't believe a man cares so much about your figure. Do you? . . , Of course, though, you wouldn't know. But what I mean is— it's just something you've got or you haven't got. That's what George says. He says he could look at a hundred women and not one of them could interest him unless she happened to have just that something.

• • • •

"You know though, Miss Brooks, I just can't get over your not being married. It looks like some man would have come along. You know that old rhyme—George is always quoting it, 'There never was a goose so gay, but some day soon or late'——

"Well really, I don't think it's too late yet Miss Brooks for you to get married . . . No really I don't! There surely ought to be some nice old bachelors or widowers around somewhere. The only trouble is men never have any sense about those things. They always want to run after some little cutie.

"You know George is always saying, 'Now Sally Brooks would make some man a fine wife—if he'd just have sense enough to see it.' And I think he's right. Say, you know what I'm going to do? I'm going to look around and see if I can't find you a husband . . . Yes I am too! . . . Yes, and I'm going to have George look around too . . . Oh, yes, I am . . . I mean it . . . I'm just going to see what I can scare up! There surely ought to be somebody."

Conservative Trends Seen in Paris Prints

Paris (U.P.).—Generally speaking, there is a noticeable Parisian tendency to more conservative prints, both as to color and design. The smartness of polka-dotted and finely figured surah silks is the most striking reflection of this tendency.

Lavender and mauve shades provide favorite backgrounds—along with black, white and navy. Maggy Rouff uses a print with a lavender background and a black and white floral design for a simple afternoon dress. Mauve makes the background for Schiaparelli's print which has bunches of purple grapes and white leaves trailing over its surface.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, July 31.

A FEW days ago the Finger-Free glove was unveiled at a Park Avenue hotel before a large audience of magazine people and glove buyers, and what seems to me the greatest advance in handwear since they cut mittens into fingers seems to be under way.

ALICE HUGHES.

This revolutionary departure in glove-making is the brain baby of a lovely blonde gal in her twenties whose tag is Gladys Whitcomb, who hails from Columbus, Ohio, and hails loudly. This showing for a few of us girls and boys was a preview. The day after Labor Day Gladys' creations go on the counters of one of the famous Fifth Avenue stores, and shortly thereafter she hopes they will sweep the country, like love in "Of Thee I Sing." Gladys was smitten by a titanic idea which turned out to be a complete new deal in glove construction, the first in centuries.

The "Finger-Free" paddy-cover is in three dimensions, fitting the anatomy of the hand. A third wall is sewn along the inside edge of the palm and up and down and around all the fingers—doing away with the pointed finger ends and the tight, cramping seam between thumb and forefinger. In fact, they are the only really comfortable coverings that ever went on over these gnarled old paws, and they go on and come off with the greatest of ease.

It was the opinion of the visiting gentry that friend Gladys has something there. They are not only easy on the hand, but lend themselves perfectly to new and pleasing ornamental design as well. So let there be red fire and dancing in High street, Columbus, once more! Gladys Whitcomb, clever home-town girl, has made mighty good in the big city already—and this is just one of her tricks.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The fine old city of Boston, once regarded as the sole custodian of culture in Ammedicah, sees one of its pretty daughters give in to this appalling New York plague of little socialites singing sophsticated songs (horrors!) in night spots (faugh!) for money (fooey!) I learn that Sally Clark learned to love such haunts and yearned to trill in them during visits to this wicked communuity. And now she is actually at it, this tasty sister-in-law of John Roosevelt, et al., at Boston's Ritz-Carlton roof. Alas, and again, alas! Most of New York's Park Avenue Helen Morgans have given up for the summer, but Adelaide Moffet is singing for her supper and a few shillings at the famed Piping Rock Club at Saratoga this month. What's come all over our girls? Next thing we know they'll be puffin' coffin nails and a-drinkin' hard cider! Fast, I call it . . .

I hear that Zoe Akins, the brilliant veteran dramatist who wears the monocle, will have three plays on Broadway come the first frost. Good going. I still think of her "Miss Lulu Bett" as one of the best American folk plays I ever saw—but pshaw, you wouldn't remember. That was WAY back!

The only big movie preview on Broadway, so far this hot spell, was that of "Alexander's Ragtime Band," in which the beauty of Mr. Tyrone Power is on disply. A big crowd at the Hollywood Theater, but mostly blanks like the spouse and myself, and the only so-called celeb I could spot was Annabella, the French girl, who has just wound up a Hollywood role in "Suez" and is off for a promenade in that dear Paris. Simply mark the rest "Out of Town."

Upward Trend Seen in Hats For Fall Wear

Chapeaux Won't Be 'Crazy,' but They'll Display Surprises Aplenty.

WHATEVER else your new fall hat is, it will be different. That does not necessarily mean it will be "crazy." The extreme hats that have been the forerunner of the new season have made many women fearful of hat hunting this fall. However, there is such a large variety that almost any shape of face can be suited.

Besides being surprising in shape the new fall hats are characterized by color and eligance. And virtually all express the upward movement that is the motif of both clothes and coiffures for fall.

Many crowns tower skyward. Some are shaped like truncated cones, some are pointed, others pleated and folded into a number of intricate effects. A few crowns remain low and squared. Brims roll up straight or zigzag, dip to the side, split in the back, bow to the right or bend to the left.

Plumes, feathers, ribbons, clips and jewels are featured trimmings. Embroidery also adds elegance to the velvet hats. Veils are still controversial but those who like them may continue to wear them and be smart. Color is highly important as a decorative note. Prune, hunters green, black and all deep wine shades are top favorites.

There are at least six distinct styles with many modifications in the hats for fall and winter. They are as follows:

THE DOLL HAT—Very small and cocky, held on by a band of ribbon tied under the back curls.

THE WATTEAU HAT—Expressed by the lifted back and forward plunge.

THE BERET—Many shoot up at one side to reveal the new haircomb or rise to extreme heights in back or front or come in a round off-the-face version.

SPECTATOR SPORTS—Also an exponent of the high crown that shows considerable detail treatment with tucks, pleats or draping.

TRICORNE—The tricorne pill box has small turned up crown that dips over one eye.

PROFILE—Reminiscent of the 1900 period. May have either medium sized brim that tilts forward with ostrich trimming and a veil drawn over the face; or large upward brim that leans heavily to one side and leaves the other side bare.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

THIS COLUMNIST HEREWITH turns traitor to her sex and gives the gentlemen the last word (for once in a lifetime!) in a highly controversial exchange growing out of a letter from "Annoyed Bachelor," published here July 26. The writer narrated, in reproachful vein, the "date-breaking practices" of 13 out of 15 young ladies he knows. Whereupon women readers sassed right back. But now comes his own sex, galloping to the rescue. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The response to the fellow who objected to the unfair dating practices of his girl friends has been quite a revelation to me. Admittedly, he sounded a little cocky, but I thought his position fundamentally sound. As yet, I have had little experience along such lines, my time being even more completely occupied with other matters than his. But the time inevitably will come when I shall be sucked into the whirlpool, and I am beginning to look forward to that time with considerable trepidation.

The field of courtship is the last one left to the rugged individualists and as a good New Dealer I am in favor of its regulation. There ought to be some sort of commission, corresponding to the Federal Trade Commission, to prohibit unfair trade practices on the part of Washington's marriageable females, a commission empowered to issue cease-and-desist orders in cases like that of "Annoyed Bachelor."

• • • •

I should like to see you made a member of this commission, Miss Haworth, but a clear majority should be representatives of the consumers—that is to say, the bachelors. The commission might also be given powers similar to those of the Food and Drug Administration, to prevent false advertising and misbranding or mislabeling of packages. If this were done, I am afraid that at least half the girls in Washington would have to be labeled "Poison—for external use only."

TEMPORARILY DISGUSTED BACHELOR.

In Defense of Debutantes.

DEAR MARY HAYWORTH: "Average Local Girl" seems to pride herself on being a hard-boiled realist, with, I might add, the rather predatory instincts of her kind. Her violent generalizations on the debutante racket leads me to suspect the group for which she constitutes herself spokesman. At any rate, compared with her or her kind, the average debutante is refreshingly naive.

• • • •

She may have the right idea as to the triumph of mind over feeling. But personally I prefer girls with a little less brains and a little more sincerity. The average girl's technique is usually transparent enough. I wonder if it has occurred to this particular girl that some men are intelligent enough to see through all her insincere "psychological" devices for making them "matrimonial minded?"

• • • •

For myself, I choose fumbling innocence in preference to that adroit omniscience, so close to vulgarity. Any genuine affection, however clumsily expressed, is more endearing than a crafty and calculating artistry. And more surprising and delightful, too. Calculations, being what they are, are unfortunately calculable. There is no charm in a decipherable subtlety. One honest glance carries more dynamite than the most devastating wile that I have ever known.

• • • •

I hope the young lady will be lucky enough to love the man she marries, even if he isn't the foolish "Annoyed Bachelor," whom she suspects she knows and would like to annex. Real love might work havoc with her polished game, but at least it might make the set-up more interesting and the tie more binding.

AVERAGE LOCAL BOY.

Why Bachelors Are Happy.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In the controversy over "Annoyed Bachelor," who, incidentally, has no reason to be annoyed so far as I can see, I note that "Average Local Girl" uses this language in her letter. ". . . . let me say that integrity is something that no girl possesses as it applies to a suitor or possible suitor . . . . No girl can be trusted to treat a man fairly when the chase is in progress." Possibly this explains in a nutshell the lack of masculine interest in "the chase," and the prevalence of happy and contented bachelors LUKE.

Army Private Speaks.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: On behalf of "Annoyed Bachelor," and in answer to his feminine critics, I should like to offer the following: The pretty young lady of 22 summers, "Average Local Girl," says the husband-hunting tactics of local debutantes have assumed the proportions of a common racket, calls the society pages of local newspapers "pages of social want-ads," and in the next breath adds, "yet all women of my age think in terms of matrimony . . . I try to play the game of psychology, the role of indifference, sometimes the Dale Carnegie system and occasionally use a bit of lovemaking, in attempting to make my dates matrimony conscious."

• • • •

In view of the above one wonders (but not for long) just who is the more designing woman, the local debutante or the average local girl. She says, further, that "date breaking is a girl's privilege. If a girl is constant before she is engaged, it is either because she is dumb or unattractive, or has lost all sense of sport." Down through the ages, woman by her own example and expectation has taught man to be honest, fair, decent and loyal. By her standards and by her behavior she has brought out the chivalry in man, has forced him to respect and honor her goodness, virtue and loveliness. Yet, it would appear that "Average Local Girl" is out to scrap this time-honored mission of women, and to replace it with deceit, chicanery, Dale Carnegie systems and "occasionally bit of lovemaking."

• • • •

Bachelor, you should be annoyed! Then, "Southern Girl" says, "He started off his letter by sounding off his own trumpet. Was it necessary to itemize the details of his success?" As I understand it, a girl likes to be pursued. If she has a thousand suitors at her door, she is glorified. Right? Then, she would choose the most eligible contender. His success would be her success. How fitting, then, for the man to place some emphasis upon his success and his achievements.

• • • •

Bachelor, you should be annoyed? "Jean" says: "It is my belief that no girl of 25 is interested in purely friendly relations with men . . . She is interested in living her life to the best advantage." So what? So where is this thing called romance? Woman is supposed to be, and generally is, the very essence of beauty, charm and love. And yet it seems that the question of love never enters the minds of these matrimonially inclined women. It is doubtful if any of the girls who pitched into "Annoyed Bachelor" ever experienced love . . . Yet aside from love, there still remains kindness and thoughtfulness—or does there?

Director Finds Fairy Tales Are Good for Child

Snow White's Victory Over Adult Gives Emotional Release.

This time it's Mrs. Clare Tree Major, director of plays for children, who contends all this talk about the danger of exposing children to fairy tales is foolish.

She has sent her five troupes into hundreds of schools all over the country to present "Cinderella," "Jack and the Bean Stalk," and the rest, and she reports a heavy demand.

A Case Of Domination.

Why are children so fond of fairy tales? Because children are dominated by adults, she says, and they look forward to the day when they can dominate the adult world.

In the fairy tale—"Snow White" and "Cinderella," for example—the child conquers the adult. And every child watching the performance gains a kind of emotional release while he suffers and triumphs with the heroine.

There's no clash between real life and the fairy tale world, insists Mrs. Major. All real life is only a fairy story to the child anyway, she says, because he hasn't had enough experience to distinguish between the two.

The Educational Moral.

Mrs. Major finds the moral of the fairy story educational, too. The good are rewarded. If the Bible can teach it, why can't the fairy tale? In "King of the Golden River," and "Hans Brinker" kind and forgiving natures finally surmount obstacles.

Keep Waistline in Order During Hot, Lazy Summer.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IT IS EASY to let yourself go in hot weather. As you drift through the lazy summer days, you are probably not in the least concerned about your waistline. But although fall is 30 degrees away on the thermometer, it is only 30 days by the calendar before you are straining into those slick tailored things designed exclusively for the woman with a slim midsection. What you need for the hot weather are some easy exercises, but which will do the trick of slenderizing you down.

Today's exercises answer your purpose perfectly. They require practically no effort so you will not have to goad yourself into exercising when your sole inclination is to succumb to the summer slump. Moreover, they are effective. They will hold your tummy firmly in its place.

MOVEMENT: Keeping the knees flexed, twist at the waist and rest the left thigh on the floor. Twist at the waist again, and bring the legs over until the right thigh rests on the floor. Return to the original position and flatten the back until even the small of the back is on the floor. Relax completely and do the whole thing over again, repeating ten times.

MOVEMENT: Bow the back up in the air like and angry cat, pulling up and in with the tummy muscles and arching the back as high as possible. Now, with the arms straight and without moving the hands, push backward until the hips are resting on the heels. Relax the abdominal muscles and rest for a second, then move forward, again arching the back and pulling up with these muscles. Repeat ten times.

Finish With Vigorous One.

By the time you have finished these two exercises, you will feel in the mood for something more vigorous and you can finish in good form with this one:

POSITION: Stand on one leg, the other leg straight out at the side with foot resting on a heavy chair. Have the arms stretched straight out at the sides.

MOVEMENT: Bend sharply sideward, continuing to hold the arms at the shoulders. Return to position and repeat three times, then change and do the exercise standing on the other leg.

In spite of the weather, you can certainly exert yorself enough to do three exercises as easy as these, and they will hold your measurements in line.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Mr. Dies
... talking Texan

As a Congressman twirls his radio dial these long summer afternoons, and gets little but baseball broadcasts, he may be content (if he's a fan) to hear that the count is three and two on Gehrig. . . . But he's also apt to meditate:

"If they can broadcast from Bangor to San Diego that Lefty Gomez has just hit a foul ball, why can't they broadcast the debates in Congress?"

As he thinks it over, the honorable gentleman is likely to be a little irritated that the House and Senate haven't been studded with microphones long, long ago, and that the patriots aren't as familiar with his voice as with Jack Benny's or Charlie McCarthy's.

• • • •

And, indeed, it is strange that in such a radio-conscious democracy, the radio chains—and the sponsors—haven't bestirred themselves to give the citizenry a ringside seat at the lily-gilding, eagle-screaming, nation-saving and baloney-slicing which goes on in Congress.

Except when the Republic has the colic, there are no more than 100 daily sessions of the two Houses a year. Usually they meet at noon and adjourn around 4 o'clock, Monday through Friday. . . . If the radio audiences yawned the number and length of sessions could be trimmed. . . . Often they don't even meet on Mondays or Fridays.

• • • •

The three great chains which inundate the land with words and music could split up the job, and two and one-half hours on each would be enough to send every precious word of every Senator and Representative roaring out across the waiting distances into every eager ear.

• • • •

There shouldn't be any trouble about sponsors . . . At first there will doubtless be some wan ethical objections to letting a breakfast food or a beer sponsor a Congressional speech . . . But Morgenthau's Baby Bonds or Harry Hopkins' Balanced Diet or WPA's Stylish Spring Suits could gobble up a 30-minute jeremiad by Carter Glass or 15 minutes of Senator Bennett Clark's quips.

• • • •

"You are about to hear a five-minute oration by Representative Vincent Harrington, through the courtesy of Honest Hal Ickes' PWA Projects, the Sunshine Brand." And a little later:

"Send in a brick from one of Mr. Ickes' projects, or a reasonably good facsimile, to the Department of the Interior, or the station to which you are listening, and receive a 10-carat gold lapel-button likeness of the Hon. Mr. Ickes."

In a way, it isn't so much the eagerness of the populace to hear these debates which makes it imperative to broadcast them, as it is the eagerness of the members of Congress to be heard. There have been bitter complaints by some members that not only do they find it difficult to get radio time, but that their own colleagues won't listen to them.

Last session Maverick (bless us!), Patman and Dies of Texas, Ham Fish and Celler of New York, got far more radio time from the chains than any other five Representatives; Senators Capper, Nye, Vandenberg, Holt and Reynolds catapulted more words into the ether than any other five Senators. One member was so outraged that he was ready to buy radio time just for the privilege of making his colleagues listen to him, maybe.

• • • •

So let's wire the House and Senate for sound; drape the microphones, one in front of every seat; soundproof the walls with cork; assign attendants to stage-whisper "Quiet, please!" as Borah clears his throat; divide up the time so every member may tell the world at least once a fortnight what's keeping him awake nights . . . Let the land listen in as the eagles of democracy sound off; and let every patriot take a long siesta each day to keep his finger on the pulse, or to get a nap. There might even be all-request programs.

200 Flee Capital to Learn All About Nature on Old Leiter Estate in Nearby Virginia

Two hundred persons escaped city heat yesterday by going to the old Leiter estate, along the Virginia side of the Potomac above Chain Bridge, for a stroll through the cool woods. Naturalists from the National Capital Parks office pointed out the natural beauties and explained trees, shrubs and flowers. The estate has been turned over to the Federal Government and is being developed as a recreation area.

Enough nature lovers and scorched urbanites to total 200 yesterday fled the shimmering pavements of Washington to wander through nearby Virginia woods and absorb a lot of things they never knew before about things that grow.

They strolled through the old Leiter estate along the Virginia side of the Potomac just north of Chain Bridge, dodged poison ivy and peered curiously at wild flowers along the way. Escorting them, under auspices of the National Capital Parks office, were Park Naturalist Donald McHenry and Ranger Naturalist Arthur W. Shively.

The group rambled over the 160 acres given to the Government by heirs of the late Joseph Leiter as adjustment for taxes and learned that the common ragweed is really the villain in causing hay fever for which goldenrod gets the blame. The naturalists reminded the strollers that polen from the ragweed (it's ambrosia in the books) will be abroad in about a month, packed with violent sneezes.

Pollen from ambrosia is scattered at the same time as that from goldenrod, McHenry explained. Medical science has now discovered that it actually is the ambrosia pollen which causes the irritation and not the heavy, greasy pollen of goldenrod.

Those learning the secrets of nature were somewhat in contrast to those who formerly visited the estate of Joseph Leiter, famous Chicago trader who cornered the wheat market. Many stories were circulated during prohibition days of the parties given at the 600-acre estate with a 50-room house.

The old house, shingled with wood from California redwoods, is now closed, but it boasts of a wine cellar with a 2,500-bottle capacity. During prohibition it was hijacked, and there were gangland rumors about who did the job, but nothing was ever established definitely.

McHenry also declared that the grove of paw paw trees was most peculiar for this region. The tree normally is found in regions south of here. It is related to tropical plants. A grove along the river gives one the feeling of walking through a tropical forest.

Other natural curiosities are rhododendrums, growing in wild profusion on the slope from the house to the river. Although it is not known definitely, it is believed that Leiter had them transplanted there.

Part of the estate given to the Government runs a mile and a quarter along the river opposite Little Falls and feeder dam for the Chesapeake & Potomac Canal. Eventually it will become part of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, to extend from Mount Vernon to Great Falls.

The Government portion of the estate is now open at all times to the public. A natural beauty spot, it has been allowed to remain a wilderness.

Brutal Police Blamed for Fear of Riots

Mass Meeting Scores 'Needless Beatings and Killings.'

Fear of riots spawned by alleged police brutality was expressed yesterday by speakers at a mass meeting of approximately 1,200 colored citizens and white sympathizers at the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church. The meeting was sponsored by the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, the Rev. C. T. Murray, pastor of the church, presiding.

An "intolerable state of affairs," which he labeled "the terror of urban lynching," has been created in colored sections of Washington by "unwarranted beatings and needless killings perpetrated by police," said John F. Davis, secretary of the National Negro Congress.

Davis read the "record" of alleged police brutality in the District, and said the primary responsibility for ending conditions to which he took exception lay with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Would Avoid Riots.

Had John Warde, who leaped 17 stories to his death last Tuesday after standing on the window ledge of a New York hotel ten hours, been a colored man in Washington, "he would have been shot down in a half hour," declared the Rev. E. C. Smith, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church.

He said he expressed the attitude of better-thinking colored citizens, who would avoid a riot and are seeking a peaceable solution of the situation.

Charles H. Houston, former member of the Board of Education and now national counsel of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, cited areas in the North and the South where police were guilty of alleged brutal and discourteous treatment of colored citizens.

To Seek Removals.

He blamed the situation in Washington on disfranchisement of the District's citizens and pledged support of his organization for such legal services as might be required in attacks on police methods.

Objectives of the council of the National Negro Congress, as outlined yesterday, are to procure removal of responsible officials, suspension and trial of policemen involved in recent killings, and presentation of a petition bearing 50,000 signatures to President Roosevelt and to Congress. An organization was formed for seeking these signatures within two weeks.

A collection was taken by the Rev. W. H. Jernagin, for the ministerial alliance, $85 of which will be given to the widow of Wallace McKnight, recently shot to death by a policeman, and an equal amount placed at the disposal of the National Negro Congress.

National Guard In 'Fly' Battle At Camp Ritchie

Insects Scarce After 'War' Lasting Nearly All Afternoon.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Camp Ritchie, Md., July 31.—Two units of the District National Guard today took up their routine duties of camp life after spending most of Saturday afternoon battling hordes of flies.

Armed with spray guns, fly swatters and fly paper, the advance detail of Company B, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, and two companies of the 272d Infantry killed thousands of flies before a meal could be eaten in peace. Today the insects were very scarce.

Assigned to Camp Ritchie for field training in motor transport work, the quartermaster organization is spending the first few days convoying trucks used by the special troops for the last two weeks, back to their bases.

Arriving hours overdue, the first convoy, commanded by Lieut. Henry M. Boudinot, drove into camp at midnight. The fatigued men were immediately marched to a long-delayed meal. Matters were made still worse as the truck hauling all personal baggage had a breakdown on the road and arrived an hour and a half later. Many men were so tired they didn't wait for their bedding and turned in on bare cots.

The 272d Infantry held its first formal guard mount and battalion drill with impressive military formations on the parade ground this evening. Band music for the occasion was furnished by the "canned band" (an Army sound truck). Company A of the 272d, a Washington organization, is under the command of Capt. Alfred Cragler. With a company from Baltimore, the infantry units are going to spend the two-week camp period in battle maneuvers.

The quartermaster motor transport unit returned to Washington today to convoy another allotment of trucks from Camp Simms, D. C., to Camp Ritchie and Pikesville, Md. Wednesday they will assist in trucking baggage of the 121st Engineers to Ritchie, at the completion of the test mobilization now being engaged in by the engineer troops at the Anacostia camp.

Straighten Out Own Lives First, Personal Evangelists Advised

'Unsettled Problems' in Religious Makeup Hinder Many Individuals, He Tells Crowd at First Congregational Church.

The danger of being asked embarrassing questions concerning our own religious experience is the greatest fear in personal evangelism, the Rev. Walter G. Borchers, sr., missionary to the Brazilian lepers, told a congregation yesterday at First Congregational Church.

"So long as we have unsettled problems in our own lives, such as selfishness, pride, love of the material, misuse of sex and other things, they make cowards of us," said the speaker, father of the church's assistant minister, who presided.

Contending that "personal evangelism, in such cases, is risky business," he stated that "under the circumstances most of us prefer the platform or pulpit, where we can preach at others while being protected from the possibility of being attacked by hand grenades in the form of embarrassing questions about our personal problems."

"We also fear the 'soul-surgery' necessary to fitting us for witnessing—the cutting out of the moral cancer—as well as being ostracized, being dubbed fanatics, and being different from the lovers of the world," pointed out the Rev. Mr. Borchers, now on furlough after 31 years' service at his leper post in Pirapitinguy, Brazil.

Urging the audience to become "physicians of the soul," he stressed the need of carefully diagnosing each spiritual case, and advising treatment for the individual problem.

Assails Intemperance

"Washington and America are reaping the whirlwind of intemperance," said the Rev. John E. Briggs last night from the pulpit of the Fifth Baptist Church in the Southwest.

Blaming lack of parental training and authority in part for present conditions, he emphasized that "the first step in the direction of crime is taking a drink, whether in a home or in a public drinking place."

Quoting figures indicating that there are more than 1,000,000 women employed as hostesses in night clubs, saloons, cocktail rooms, dance halls and gambling institutions in America, he said. "The hostess' usual greeting is 'hello, sucker.'

"With a daily crime bill of $41,000,000, with 36 persons murdered daily in America, with our jails filled to overflowing, and with drunken drivers endangering the lives of our loved ones, dissipation is at a new high, leading to ill health and indifference to spiritual values," warned the clergyman.

"The gospel of God's grace only is sufficient for these conditions," he pointed out, pleading for a return to first principles, common sense and the Ten Commandments.

Urges Golden Rule

Preaching at St. Mark's Episcopal Church, the Rev. William R. Moody stressed that "the only way to be truly happy and successful is to help other people."

"The person who aids in healing a crippled child by furnishing hospitalization, and sees the happiness which his help has brought, is paid beyond anything that money can give," according to the Rev. Mr. Moody, "and the man who sends a poor boy to college and sees him grow into a fine strong man, gets a reward that cannot be measured in dollars."

The week-end's heat must have aroused the public's sympathy for the children who swelter four and five to a room in Washington tenements. Contributions to The Post Camp Fund rose with the thermometer yesterday and reached a new high of $203.56 by last night.

Swelled by two anonymous gifts of $100 and $50, the largest single contributions to date, the fund now stands at $1,083. That's good news to 77 of the 100 youngsters for whom The Post is raising the money.

For it means that all 77 will pack up their bathing suits and tennis shoes some time this month, say good-by to a hot city and to crowded homes and set out for two weeks at camp.

The generous gifts also are a welcome indication to the 23 boys and girls who have not yet been provided for. If Mr. and Mrs. Washington care enough about their plight to give the fund $1,083, certainly they will not balk at adding $317 more to take care of the remaining 23.

Every $14 mailed or brought to The Post Building means 14 days at camp for one more child. Each $14 means one less disappointment in the group of 100. In terms of health and renewed energy, it means 336 hours filled with fresh air, body-building food and wholesome exercise for a child who sorely needs them.

A 22-year-old equestrienne was painfully injured yesterday when a runaway horse carried her more than a quarter of mile through traffic crowded roads in Rock Creek Park, threw her to the ground and kicked her until rescuers pulled her to safety.

HAZEL GREEN.

A man companion attempted to rescue her and was himself severely cut and bruised when he fell from his horse as he tried to grab the reins of the fleeting animal.

She was treated for a broken rib, numerous cuts and bruises about the head, arms and body. Her companion, John Thoman, 21, 3110 N street northwest, was treated for a deep laceration in the chin and bruises about the body.

The couple was riding along the bridle paths just in rear of the Zoo when Miss Green's mount suddenly reared, and dashed down the winding path. Coming onto the roadway near the underpass, the horse raced through a heavy line of Sunday traffic. Several cars were forced to stop or swerve sharply to avoid hitting the frightened steed.

Just as the horse approached the narrow entrance to the underpass near Massachusetts avenue, he stopped suddenly, throwing the girl against a brick wall guarding a 10-foot drop to a park stream.

Catching her foot in a stirrup when she fell, the girl was dragged for about 15 feet before the animal turned and kicked her free of the stirrup.

Considered expert riders, the couple said they had just left a riding academy where they rented the horses when the animal Miss Green was riding suddenly broke into a run and refused to stop.

5 Youths Seized Spending $20 in Pennies at Park

Five Washington youths, ranging in age from 14 to 16, were arrested at Glen Echo ameusement park last night when a policeman noticed them spending an unusual quantity of pennies. According to police, the boys admitted taking the money from scales in the basement of the National Press Building.

N. Y. Hitch-Hikers Lose $30 Hoarde On Capital Visit

Arriving in Washington last night after hitch-hiking from New York and anxious to spend some of the $30 they had saved for the occasion, two 20-year-old youths were forced to spend the night at the Gospel Mission House when they lost their money.

Appearing at Police Headquarters with only 3 cents in their pockets, Robert Carroll and Milton Roseburg, both ushers in New York theaters, told how they started to go to a downtown movie when they found the wallet containing all their cash was missing.

Motorman Slashed By Colored Man

While attempting to eject an intoxicated colored man from a street car at Eighth and L streets southeast, Julian Oliff, 35, of Anacostia, D. C., the motorman, was slashed on the leg early yesterday.

Dr. Walter Bailey, Former Red Cross Aide Here, Dead

Barnard, Vt., July 31.—Dr. Walter Channing Bailey, of Cambridge, Mass., noted heart and lung specialist, died here today of a cerebral hemorrhage at the summer cottage of Mrs. Charles Chapman. He retired from active practice several years ago because of poor health.

Dr. Bailey was born in 1870 and graduated from Harvard in 1894. After a few years of postgraduate study in Vienna, he became associated with Dr. Vincent Y. Bowditch, eminent heart and lung surgeon of New York.

Shortly before the outbreak of the World War, Dr. Bailey was head of the personnel department of the American Red Cross at Washington, D. C., a post he left to become head of the Massachusetts Hospital for Tuberculosis. During the World War, at the request of the Rockefeller Foundation, he was placed in charge of wounded hospital zones in France. Subsequently he was decorated by the Polish government for his work as the organizer of the first relief expedition to enter that country.

Widow, 65, Routed By Gas After She Fires at Kin, Police

A 65-year-old widow was routed from the basement of her home at 4229 Grant street northeast by tear gas last night after she had fired at members of her family and at police. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation.

Called by radio to the Grant street address, Scout Car Patrolmen C. R. Feagan and R. L. Rison of Eleventh Precinct, found Mrs. Emma Baird barricaded in the basement and her daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Cullender, and Mrs. Cullender's husband standing in the yard. The Cullenders told them Mrs. Baird had fired at them in the house for some unknown reason and a neighbor said she counted five shots. Reagan and Rison pushed open the basement door.

Threatened by Mrs. Baird, they retreated to their car, got tear-gas grenades. They hurled the bombs inside and reported they heard one shot fired. In a few moments, Mrs. Baird staggered to the door, overcome by the gas.

Eskimo Kayak Lost In Merry, Hot Day Rock Creek Voyage

Oscar A. Thorup, 16, of 7010 Rolling road, Chevy Chase, Md., yesterday found navigating Rock Creek in a homemade kayak not only dangerous but expensive. Last night he was without his Eskimo canoe and lucky to have his life.

The youth reported to park police he put the kayak into the creek near the tennis courts and traveled merrily downstream until he struck an overhanging limb at Kalmia road and Beach drive. The canoe overturned and Thorup swam ashore. His craft disappeared.

Washington Showmen Sponsor A Pretentious Relief Program

Variety Club Adopts Life-Saving Plan to Reduce High Baby Mortality Rate; Gene Ford to Produce 'Going Native;' A Royal Farewell; Notes of the Theater.

THE BOAST of the Variety Club of Washington that it is primarily a humanitarian organization, and a social club only secondarily, is substantiated by the announcement that the club directorate, representing Washington's theatrical and amusement interests, from which the membership of the club is drawn, last week voted the adoption of the most pretentious charitable enterprise it ever has undertaken.

BELL.

Dr. Kotz, well known obstetrician, has brought to the attention of Rudolph Berger, chairman of Variety's welfare committee, and of the club, the crying need in Washington of modern facilities for the care of babies that are prematurely born. Records indicate that there are some 300 of these cases in the National Capital every year, of which little or nothing is ever heard. Among these prematurely born babies the mortality rate is astoundingly high, ranging up to 55 per cent for those born in private homes and to 40 per cent for those born in hospitals not completely equipped with the most modern facilities for treatment.

Through experiments made at the Michael Reese Hospital, in Chicago, and with modern individual-unit incubators, and other apparatus devised by Prof. Julius H. Hess, head of the department of pediatrics, College of Medicine, of the University of Illinois, there is now on the market complete scientific apparatus, use of which in the great hospitals of the East and Middle West has cut the mortality rate of prematurely born babies from 55 per cent to 28 per cent of those babies born in homes which have the use of these units, and from 40 per cent to 23 per cent for those born in hospitals which also have the use of this modern equipment.

A typical unit consists of 12 individual, air-conditioned incubators, which are so easily portable that they may be carried to the most humble home in a private motor car or taxicab; six units for oxygen treatment, a special ambulance unit for desperate cases, and a multitude of accessories, such as electrically heated dressing tables, violet ray machines, pumps, etc.

At a meeting held in its clubrooms in the Willard Hotel last week, it was unanimously and enthusiastically decided that Variety would furnish Washington with the first of these combination units, which, it has been tenatively decided, will be placed in Sibley Hospital. The hospital management has agreed to provide adequate housing facilities.

The hospital also will furnish the services of three nurses, which the club will send to Chicago for special training in the use of this equipment, so that they may be able to instruct their fellow nurses in its use upon their return.

It is understood that these units will be at the service, in Washington and vicinity, of all classes of patients, without cost to them, although the hospital, of course, will make its usual charges for its other services in the cases of those who are able to pay, but without charge to those unable to pay. The units furnished by Variety will be available to all hospitals in the city, when not in use, on call.

It is the expectation that this preliminary step will be extended to other hospitals and become one of the principal "career charities" of the Variety Club in Washington, thus resulting in the saving of literally hundreds of lives that now are lost.

In this connection it seems pertinent to recall that the Variety Club already has provided portable motion picture and sound equipment to provide entertainment for the shut-ins of Washington, has provided two-week summer outings for hundreds of underprivileged children and their mothers, has done valuable relief work among its own membership and recently presented the Emergency Hospital with a new and fully equipped—not to mention sorely needed—ambulance. Variety rapidly is putting a new complexion on "show business" in Washington.

• • • •

Having already assured local aspirants for footlight fame that this year's "Going Native" revue, to be staged this month, will be benefited by the expert counsel and advice of the famous dance director, Chester Hale, the management of Loew's Capitol Theater further insures the success of the all-local show by making known that Gene Ford will be in charge of production.

It will be remembered that it was Gene Ford who staged all of the preceding "Going Native" revues and played so vital a part in their success. Since relinquishing the managership of the Capitol Theater, Mr. Ford has been associated with Radio Station WHN in New York. While his duties there will not permit his continuous residence in the Capital during the preparation of "Going Native," he will commute with sufficient regularity to give it ample attention. Gene will arrive in town tomorrow night in time for the second session of auditions in the Willard Hotel.

The first auditions will be held in the Willard Room tonight at 8 o'clock. They will be preceded, at 6, by a dinner tendered to his managerial associates and the drama desks of the local press by Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc. More of this later.

Saturday night's testimonial dinner at the Willard to Arthur A. DeTitta, Washington manager of Fox Movietone News, recently transferred to the European field with headquarters in Paris, was one of the most felicitous occasions of its kind ever celebrated in this city. With 150 guests seated at the tables and Alvin L. Newmyer acting as toastmaster, brief speeches of congratulation and regret were made by Truman H. Talley, general manager of Fox Movietone News and several of his associates down from New York for the event, representatives of the various departments of the Government, theatrical associates and members of the press. Lew Lehr, the dialect news commenator, "stole the show"— as was to have been expected.

Wire, cable and radio messages were read from President Roosevelt, Postmaster General Farley, Marvin H. McIntrye, of the Presidential secretariat, and scores more. A special edition of the Movietone News was shown with the President and his cabinet, distinguished world figures and local celebrities of the amusement field participating and Lew Lehr supplying most of their voices! Additional entertainment was provided by Jim and Mildred Mulcay, the Andrews Sisters and "Slim" Timblin and company from the current Capitol stage show.

While all this was going on, the distaff membership of Variety was similarly honoring Mrs. DeTitta in the Willard's Presidential suite. After the formal festivities were concluded the two parties merged in the Variety clubrooms, where, I dare say, the whole merry business is still going on!

• • • •

Official corroboration was given a fact that has been known, sub rosa, for some time, by the announcement at Saturday night's rout that Mr. DeTitta's successor in Washington will be Anthony Muto, a well known figure in Washington's theatrical and official circles. Tony Muto long was the Will H. Hays representative in Washington and more recently has been associated with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Motion Picture Machine Operators, known as the IATSE for short, in the capacity of public relations counsel. Tony and Arthur split the congratulations about evenly. A good man follows a good man.

ZaSu Pitts has been "piling 'em in" in such crowds over the week-end that there will be five de luxe performances at the Earle today, the same as Saturday.

Little

Doubly familiar to the National Capital by reason of its original release in this country as a German-made silent picture in 1921, and a decade and a half later as a French "all-talkie" production, "The Golem," this week is revived as chief feature of the screen bill at the Little Theater.

It is the French production, first distributed in America in 1937, that is on view at the Little, with Harry Baur in the stellar role and Germaine Aussey, Roger Duchesne, Charles Dorat and Ferdinand Hart leading the distinguished European cast. The dialogue is interpreted by superimposed English titles that are more than ordinarily illuminating, although the action of this legendary drama is such as to be virtually self-explanatory.

The legend of the Golem has survived from the City of Prague in the seventeenth century. The Golem is a robot figure that may be animated to protect the Ghetto from disaster through the instrumentality of certain scriptural words. The formula is handed down to Rabbi Jacob from Rabbi Loew and is not invoked for many years. Then, to combat a demented and oppressive Emperor, its omnipotence again is awakened through a series of forceful and thrilling dramatic events.

In framing this picture for its latest screen exhibition, the producers have devised a vivid story of court intrigue, duplicity, persecution and heroic fortitude. It is staged with dignity and majestic effect and represents a vast technical advancement over the mechanical imperfections of the silent film.

The players cast in the pivotal roles have been chosen from the foremost acting forces of the continent. Harry Baur is an artist whose attainments are known and recognized on both sides of the Atlantic. The supporting players deserve to be.

Two Weary Gentlemen Seem a Bit Perplexed

The Post's New Yorker

DAWN ALREADY WAS UP, and a silver haze shrouded Broadway in morning splendor . . . a splendor ethereal enough to set the regulars a-dreaming. Out of it they fashioned the dream production of today, in which would be employed the most capable talent . . . foreign and native . . . now on these shores. The masterpieces of entertainment: the All-American musical comedy.

• • • •

SAM H. HARRIS would produce it. The Harris whose inaugural production "The Gay Morning Glories" was a burlesque venture which toured the United States . . . who with George M. Cohan was responsible for "45 Minutes from Broadway," "Little Johnny Jones" and "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" . . . who as an individual producer brought the Music Box Reviews, "Animal Crackers," "The Nervous Wreck," "Once in a Lifetime," "Of Thee I Sing" and "As Thousands Cheer" to the Broadway boards. Yes, Harris would produce it.

• • • •

GEORGE S. KAUFMAN would write the book. The Kaufman who was schooled in reporting, then became a columnist for a Washington paper and concluded his newspaper career on the dramatic staff of the New York Times . . . who, although they were collaborative, gave Broadway "June Moon" "The Royal Family," "The Cocoanuts," "Once In A Lifetime," The Band Wagon," "Of Thee I Sing," "You Can't Take It With You," and "I'd Rather Be Right."

• • • •

THE SONG WRITING problem prompted the most discussion. Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach were difficult to gainsay. Ira Gershwin had his constituents also. There were some who insisted that Gordon and Revel should be responsible for at least two of the song numbers. But in the dream production the Abou-ben-adams were Irving Berlin . . . whose output has endured for a generation . . . to write the music, and Cole Porter . . . whose hit songs are on the lips of a nation . . . to pen the lyrics.

• • • •

HASSARD SHORT would direct this production. Close on his purely fictional heels were John Murray Anderson and Howard Lindsay and George Abbott. But to those technicians who know whereof they speak, and dream, Mr. Short is the man.

• • • •

Trans-Lux

The death leap of an unfortunate insane after an 11-hour session on a narrow ledge far above the street level is shown, and there is a Sino-Japanese war special of the most recent atrocious happenings in terror-stricken Hankow, and then startling pictures of the worst floods in 35 years and their toll in Japan.

However, there are compensating happier features in the program: For instance, daring climbers conquering a glacier on majestic Mount Ranier, the test flight of a new double propeller plane (the propellers revolve in opposite directions), the opening of the Saratoga race meet with snap-shots of socialites, and a ludicrous Lew Lehr item. There are 30-odd other news flashes.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 31.—Talked with Frances Farmer on the "Escape From Yesterday" set. It was not an altogether friendly meeting, but interesting. While Frances was playing "Golden Boy" on the New York stage, she said some pretty harsh things about Hollywood and the local press returned it with interest.

HEDDA HOPPER

She's not easy to talk with—doesn't try to be. I don't believe she cares whether you like her or not. But she is interested, and hopes you will be, in her acting, the consuming factor of her life. She could be playing in London now in "Golden Boy," but I think she's using this picture as a proving ground to herself that she's ready for big things.

Since her arrival here, Frances has been studying singing and a Russian accent with Nina Koshetz. She has only a small part but made two tests before beginning the picture. One English, one with Russian accent. The latter was so good, she's using that. She sings a song with a throaty, earthy quality, reminiscent of Helen Morgan's early days. Dressed in a white, form-fitting gown, emeralds at the throat and waist, white slippers, no stockings—she was curled up in a chair for comfort with no regard for her dress.

"I still believe," she said, "That Hollywood is a very dangerous place for young people. It's not good to have too much money or get too much praise. Lief and I don't need much—we're young, healthy . . . but what we do need, is training. We have no social graces—don't mix. Some day we hope to be a credit to the acting profession."

Akim Tamiroff's white wig, lined face, make him look older, but it's becoming. He had a terrific fight scene to do and, to get in the mood, went over and socked his valet saying, "Come on, I dare you to return it." The valet did, not once, but several times, which stunned onlookers. But boy, did they get vitality on the screen! If he's not careful, someone will discover he's as great an actor as Paul Muni.

Then on to Claudette Colbert. She was going through with one of her mad scenes as "Zaza." Hair slicked off her neck, piled high with fringe in front. One of the most becoming styles I've ever seen on her. Even as "Zaza," who is a rough-and-tumble type, it gives Claudette a certain dignity she's never had before. Until I saw her, I wouldn't have believed a change of hair-do, could do so much for one.

Director George Cukor was keeping cool with an in-and-out shirt—mostly out. Bert Lehr is a different person under George's direction. I got only a flash of Connie Collier. Her Bond street friends won't recognize her. And Walter Catlett, who played the part Bert Lehr is doing in the picture, on the New York stage 29 years ago. I watched to see Walter steal a scene but was disappointed. He said, later, "You try and steal a scene with those three on at the same time. Can't be done." If he can't do it, no one can. I wanted to see the trained fleas but they were resting.

Then over to "Arkansas Traveler" where Irving Cobb, after three days at the Bohemian Grove in San Francisco, had been called down for this picture. Found him swapping such stories with Bob Burns! I asked director Al Santell how everything was going. "Swell, till we start working,' he said, "then everyone would rather listen to Cobb talk." I asked Cobb for a good story. He said, "Heck, if there's a good one left, it's been stolen long ago. Why, I've told some that are dated back to B. C."

Hurst Flies to Aid Modoc Indians

One of the strangest stories in California history—ranging in excitement from an incipient Indian uprising to cattle theft—was revealed this week when Paul Hurst returned to Twentieth Century-Fox to start work in "Hold That Co-ed."

Hurst, who started life as a professional hunter in what is now Sequoia National Park in Tulare County, Calif., is an authority on the California Indian.

A few weeks ago, in response to an urgent wire from one of the Modoc chiefs, Hurst flew north. There he discovered that as a result of the ill-advised action of a local official, one of the Indian tribes was on the point of futile armed rebellion. The difficulty began when one of the Indians was arrested for having venison out of season.

A quick trip to Sacramento secured for Hurst confirmation of the Indians' hunting rights. And when he returned with a document to which was affixed the gold-seal of the State, the Indians shook hands with the ranchers and went back to their hunting.

To Whom It May Concern:

Cleveland, July 31.—Johnny Allen, Cleveland's pitching ace who has lost only two games in two seasons, is under suspension by the Nats . . . who suspect him of surreptitiously using the outlawed spit-ball . . . Allen's habit of wetting his fingers with his lips between pitches drew the unofficial protests of Bucky Harris the other day . . . Allen also accumulates moisture on his pitching hand by wiping his sweaty brow on warm days, according to Harris . . . that used to be the trick of Rube Walberg when he was pitching for the Athletics.

Ability to strike a batter out goes hand and hand with wildness, it seems . . . Bob Feller and Buck Newsom, the two strikeout kings of the American League at this point, also lead the league in walking batters . . . their very wildness, which prevents a batter from digging in at the plate, is conducive to striking him out . . . ## Third Cavalry Four Defeats War Department Blues, 12-7

The Third Cavalry polo team defeated the War Department Blues, 12 to 7, yesterday on the East Potomac field to win the championship of the southeastern polo circuit.

The game was witnessed by some 6,000 persons who saw Third Cavalry pull away in the last two chukkers to score seven times and go on to win. The War Department had a handicap of three goals.

Capt. Jackie Hines led the Third Cavalry team in scoring, tallying four times and playing a sterling defensive game. Capt. Sherburne scored twice for the War Department. In the last chukker Hines galloped half the length of the field to score on a difficult underhand shot. A minute later he scored again on a difficult under-the-neck shot.

Capt. Quill kept the Blues in the running by scoring in the first part of the game. He was aided by the good work of Maj. McClure and Cadet Milton. In the third chukker Sherburne scored on a back-hand shot in the midst of the whole Third Cavalry team.

Spills by Capt. Donaldson and Capt. Smith held up the game, but neither player was injured. In the fourth chukker Capt. Donaldson eluded two War Department players to score from the 30-yard marker.

By virtue of its win, Third Cavalry will compete in the inter-circuit polo championships September at Chicago.

Fishbach Beaten In Eastern Finals

New York, July 31 (AP).—A Princeton student succeeded a Princeton instructor today as Gerard (Jeff) Podesta, captain-elect of the Tiger tennis team, defeated Joe Fishbach, of New York, 6—3, 6—2, 2—6, 6—1, to win the Eastern clay court tennis championship. Podesta succeeds John McDiarmid, of Fort Worth, Tex., who teaches at Princeton.

A packed gallery saw the Montclair (N. J.) player gain revenge for the four-set beating he took from Fishbach last June in the Eastern inter-collegiate championships.

Unlike yesterday's match in which he whipped top-seeded Wayne Sabin in a three-hour, five-set duel, Fishbach today was helpless against Podesta's fine all-around game. Jeff almost kept intact his record of not losing a set through the tournament as he ran off the first two in short order, but Fishbach found his form just long enough to take the third.

Snug Harbor Wins Two.

Snug Harbor defeated Petworth A. C. in a double-header yesterday by the scores of 5-2 and 20-1, respectively. Otto Sidell and Duck Jarbo were the winning pitchers.

Harris Glad As Nat Tilt Is Postponed

Hurlers Get Needed Rest; Clubs Moan as Rain Ruins Huge Gate.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, July 31.—Not a Washington pitcher was knocked out of the box, not a ball was muffed by the Nats, not an enemy run crossed the plate today as the Nats brought their five-game losing streak to a temporary halt.

Because there was no game. A day-long drizzle, punctuated by cloudbursts, washed out the scheduled proceedings with the Indians this afternoon and forced a stay-over tomorrow, when an open date will be utilized by the two clubs.

It was an expensive postponement for both clubs, however. With the sensational Bob Feller due to pitch the Sunday game, Cleveland officials announced that the contest would be moved to the spacious Municipal Stadium in anticipation of a crowd of 50,000.

From all parts of Ohio thousands of reservations had been made for the game by fans intrigued both by the scheduled appearance of Feller and the pennant possibilities of the Indians. Edward B. Eynon, jr., traveling secretary of the Nats, estimated that the postponement cost the Washington club $10,000 in gate receipts.

Rest Is Welcomed.

Manager Bucky Harris, however, welcomed the respite in one respect. With his team reeling from five successive defeats and as yet victoryless on their Western tour, Harris was grateful for the delay.

The Nats present their blackest picture of the season. With the fruits of their profitable home stay during which they won 11 out of 16 games, wiped out by their failures in the West, the Nats yesterday yielded fourth place to the Detroit Tigers.

At no time has Harris' pitching situation appeared as dismal. Except for Dutch Leonard, who has not yet been given a starting role on the trip, Harris' pitchers have been pitiable failures. Ferrell, Weaver, DeShong, Hogsett and Chase have been pounded from the box in succession.

No Pitching Help Likely.

And during the past five games, the Nats' pitchers have yielded up to 61 hits and 41 runs, figures that average 12 hits and more than nine runs per game. Chase is the only pitcher who has lasted as many as seven innings in the West. DeShong was pounded out in four; Weaver lasted only one inning; Ferrell was hammered out in the sixth, and Hogsett in the third.

Harris doesn't know where to turn for pitching help, what with the Nats' farm teams offering no likely looking prospects. He will start Leonard today against Feller in a desperate hope to win a ball game.

In addition to the Nats' pitching slump, the team's hitting has not been impressive despite the fact the Nats have made 47 hits and 21 runs in their five games in the West. The bulk of the hitting has been done after the club was hopelessly out of the contests in the late innings. Only in the first game of the trip did the Nats ever give one of their pitchers a lead.

Cecil Travis and Earl Averill, the No. 2 and No. 1 hitters of the league when the Nats and Indians opened their series here three days ago, have not been acting as such. In the two games played, Averill has collected one hit in six times at bat and Travis has made one hit in seven.

In only one respect is there any solace for Bucky Harris. Zeke Bonura represents that one. Bonura is showing definite signs of shaking off his season-long batting slump. Big Zeke has made five hits in 12 times at bat on the current trip including a double and a homer. His homer with the bases full against Mel Harder the other day was one of the longest balls ever hit in the Cleveland park.

With the return of Bonura to the regular lineup, Jimmy Wasdell has been definitely relegated to the bench against all types of pitching. Harris is convinced that if the Nats are to attain a first division berth this season, it will be achieved with Bonura's presence, not with Wasdell's.

Joining Wasdell on the bench for the Nats is rotund Taft Wright whose bat has been a bright note in the Nats' otherwise drab excursion through the West. But despite Wright's impressive hitting, Harris prefers Al Simmons in the Nats' outfield. Wright's fielding weaknesses have marred two of the Nats' five games in the West.

Mulhall Divides.

Johnny Revolta's 276 Wins St. Paul Tourney

Victory Is Worth $1,600; Goggin and Snead Are Second With 277.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Minn., July 31.—Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., who began picking up golf tricks as a caddie 15 years ago and has developed into one of the country's top notch "fairway magicians," plucked the $7,500 St. Paul Open championship and its $1,600 first money out from under the noses of Old Man Par and a fast field today.

The wavy-haired veteran, blazing home with a final round of 68 strokes, completed the 72 holes with a 276 total, just one under the aggregate of Big Willie Goggin, of San Bruno, Calif., and two under the total registered by "Slammin' Sam" Snead, the defending champion from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

A gallery which meet officials finally estimated at 10,000 spectators, saw a thrilling finish, with regulation figures ripped to bits and four other stars battling it out with Revolta on the final round.

The Evanston professional was the first to finish, adding a brilliant four-under-par 68 to his previous rounds of 69—68 and 71. In close pursuit were Lawson Little, former amateur king, Goggin, Snead and Ernie (Dutch) Harrison, of Chicago.

Little was the first to "crack." Leader at 296 strokes for 54 holes, he blew himself to a three-over-par seven on the second hole to ruin his title hopes, finding both rough and traps before getting home.

Harrison, after a 207 total at 54 holes and a fine outward 33 on the last round, slipped to 39 strokes coming home. Snead, unable to get going on the first 36 holes, had brilliant rounds of 68 and 67 today, but the early rounds stroke handicap was too much for him to do better than third and its $800 purse. Goggin, runner-up last year, had the finest chance for a tie and his putter let him down.

Coming to the seventeenth tee, the California star needed only a birdie and a par to tie—and the 319-yard eighteenth had been proving an easy sub-par hole. He was on the seventeenth green in 2 and three-putted from 30 feet. His gallant bid for a tying eagle on the eighteenth missed when his approach putt missed the cup by an

'Si' Peacock, Nolan Pace Local Squad

Rippy, Shea, Dettweiler Lose Matches; Sharkey Also Stars.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Catonsville, Md., July 31.—Washington's amateur golfing aces, 16 in number, settled the question of inter-city supremacy with Baltimore's finest linksmen here today over the Rolling Road course by a convincing 17-7 margin in the first annual contest sponsored by the Maryland State Golf Association.

Martin F. McCarthy, Beaver Dam and Columbia member, elected captain of the team by the golf writers who selected it, juggled the lineup in victorious fashion as the winners swept three of the eight foursomes and scored in all of them.

The man who day in and day out has proven to be the Capital City's finest golfer for the past several years, Roger S. Peacock, led the way by trouncing the host club star, Spencer Overton, 4 and 2, in the same foursome in which Maryland and Middle Atlantic titleholder Otto Greiner defeated District champ, Billy Shea, in a match not as spectacular.

Two Others Star.

Shea was accompanied in defeat by two other Congressional members, Claude Rippy and Billy Dettweiler, while Eddie Bean, Beaver Dam, and Dick Meyer, Manor's District junior champion, could not match the pace of their opponents.

Rivaling Peacock for the starring role were M. Parker Noland, Congressional, and Buddy Sharkey, Indian Spring, whose par 70 rounds were the best of the day. Nolan was out in 34, one under, and back in 36, while Sharkey started 3-3-3-2, three under, but went as many over on the next five holes and put together two par rounds of 35 each.

Sharkey and Bobby Brownell, Nolan and Earl McAleer, who rallied after knocking his first two tee shots out of bounds to defeat Edgar Lucas, and Ralph Quinter and Russ Hollebaugh composed the twosomes that swept the two individual matches and the best ball for clean sweeps.

The most one-sided triumphs were returned by Brownell, over Robert Jones, Sharkey, over Erford Barnes, Nolan over Donald McPhail, and Jerry Hart over Nathan Kaufman, Suburban's ace.

Considered Underdogs.

Peacock and Shea were decided underdogs, at least as far as the gallery form the host city was concerned, as they battled Overton and Greiner, but they upset the favorites by a 2-to-1 point margin.

Greiner and Shea did not exhibit the brand of golf they are capable of, leaving Peacock to steal the show.

Roger was 2-up at the seventh hole, and on the next placed his approach shot 2 feet from the pin, and was apparently 3-up. But here Overton holed a 40-foot putt for a halve. On the ninth Peacock's approach was inches from the cup, and Overton came through with a 30-footer for a halve in birdies, as the Washingtonians and Baltimoreans in the gallery tried to outdo the other as cheering sections.

Peacock then pushed his tee shot out of bounds on the tenth, knocked his second 4 feet from the cup and dropped the putt to halve the hole in pars. He finally lost a hole—the twelfth—where he three-putted, but turned on the heat to close the match on the sixteenth green. Shea aided on three holes in winning the best ball point.

Levi Yoder, who caught Gene Bruning on the back nine and won on the seventeenth, McCarthy, who defeated Fred Savage, and Harvey Johnson, who trounced Wilmar Wagner, jr., were the other Washington victors.

Results:

Mamakos, Who Catches Well, and Nedomatsky, Who Pitches Plenty, Will Meet Tonight

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Swarthy Steve Mamakos, the lion-hearted kid with the pachyderm hide who launched his pugilistic career on the sidewalks of southwest Washington, meets slick-haired Ivan Nedomatsky tonight at Griffith Stadium to settle a question that has had the city's ring fans hotly divided since last April.

Twice postponed, the eight-round bout has aroused more interest in fighting in the District than has been evidenced since Goldie Ahearn signed for his ill-starred meeting with Al Foreman two decades ago. The lines are clearly drawn and supporters of the pair sharply divided. There is no middle-ground. You wear one or the other's colors on your sleeve.

Some 4,000 fans, a large turnout for an ordinary bout, are expected to witness the milling, judging by a surprisingly heavy advance sale of tickets, and action is almost guaranteed. It will be a test of a good puncher against an admittedly good catcher, a situation that augurs well

Looking at it from another angle it may evolve into a test of brain against brawn, for Nedomatsky is a college-bred battler, in ring parlance a "cutie," who had the advantage of patent tutelage by expert coaches. Mamakos, a tinsmith's helper, acquired the rudiments of the game in street fights. But what Steve lacks in poise and polish is more than offset by his bulldog tactics. He doesn't know the meaning of quit, and takes pride in the fact that never has he been counted out.

Watch Kidney Blow.

Nedomatsky, a murderous right hand puncher, rules a 10-9 favorite this morning, but it probably will be even money at ringside. A considerable portion of southwest citizenry is willing to mortgage the old homestead and back Mamakos to the limit, while a sizeable wad of currency is expected from Baltimore this evening, accompanied by a delegation of Nedomatsky supporters.

Coached by Joe Dundee, former welterweight champion, and allegedly using the illegal "Baltimore punch," a kidney blow, Nedomatsky served notice on Mamakos that he is ready for the test by knocking out Charlie Thompson in one round two weeks ago. Washington fans will remember the brutal manner in which he felled El Brookman with the first punch of their bout, and knocked him down thrice again in winning a decision.

If there is a knockout Nedomatsky will score it, but if the fight goes the distance it will be a close decision—probably in Mamakos' favor. By the same token of Ivan's victory over Brookman are the Greek's supporters counting on him to win. If Brookman got up off the floor and finished the fight then Mamakos, a much tougher lad, should be able to do likewise, they reason. And they have a stout argument. Steve can not be counted out of the running until the referee tolls off the full 10-count, and will be dangerous every minute he is in an upright posture.

Nedomatsky must drive home a telling shot in the first round, rap most of the consciousness from Mamakos' head, or resign himself to a weary session of slugging over the full distance. He's got to get his man early, or he may wind up on the wrong end of one of those split decisions. Mamakos has the annoying habit of absorbing everything the enemy has, and retaliating with a two-fisted barrage that scoops up points. He loves to mix freely with the enemy, while Nedomatsky is admittedly reluctant to mingle with his opponents.

Mamakos comes up to the fight with three good victories under his belt, the last a decision over Cal Cagney, a better-than-average welterweight. The Greek knows no defense but to punch back, and will not only take two, but a half dozen blows to get one in. His style is similar to Henry Armstrong's, and both are short on skill, but long on stamina. He can be outsmarted and probably will be unless Ivan gets overanxious and shoots his bolt early and tires in the latter stages of the argument.

A fair supporting card has been arranged with Tony Ciaccio, rugged Italian who lost to Mamakos several months ago, pitted against Tommy Bland in the eight-round semifinal. Joey Green, making his debut under the expert management of Jimmy White, tackles Johnny Dube, of New York, in a 6-rounder. Johnny Tejcers, of Richmond, meets a Baltimore welterweight tagged Frankie Martin in a 4, while Kid Howe, District colored lightweight, tangles with Billy White, of Baltimore, in another 4.

New York Scores Four in 15th to Win Second Game.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 31.—The New York Yankees battled until almost dark today to increase their first-place lead over the idle Cleveland Indians to two full games in winning both ends of a double-header from the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 1 and 7 to 3, before a crowd of 25,000.

The second game went 15 innings, with Spurgeon Chandler going the entire distance, allowing eight hits and not issuing a pass. The Yanks, meanwhile, collected 17 hits off Jack Knott, John Rigney and Thornton Lee and broke up the game with a four-run assault in the fifteenth.

Singles by Red Rolfe, Tom Henrich and Lou Gehrig and a trio of Sox errors by Gerald Walker, Luke Appling and Marv Owen accounted for the runs. The Sox scored all three of their runs on four hits in the fourth. From that point through the tenth, not a Sox player reached first off Chandler as he registered his tenth triumph of the season against two defeats.

Monte Pearson pitched five-hit ball for the Yankees in the opener, his mates hammered Ted Lyons for 11. Rolfe drove out three singles and a double to pace the attack and collected three more hits in the nightcap where Henrich shined with five. It was Pearson's eighth victory and Lyons' seventh loss.

Bees Defeat Cards Twice

MacFayden and Fette Hurl Victories.

Boston, July 31 (AP).—The injury-riddled Boston Bees returned to the head of the second division today as Deacon Danny MacFayden and Lou Fette each pitched 3-to-2 victories over the St. Louis Cardinals for a sweep of the twin bill.

MacFayden was within one inning of his fourth consecutive shutout on home grounds when the Cards got to him for their only two runs of the opening game in the ninth. Three singles, a boot of a double play ball by Debs Garms, and a long outfield fly comprised the St. Louis threat, but Danny got Padgett on a pop to Fletcher to end the game with the tying and winning runs on base.

Fette's victory in the nightcap was his sixth in a row. He had a rocky second inning, in which the Cards got men to second and third with none out, but Lou got away without a run, and went on to pitch a seven-hitter against Lon Warneke, who was charged with the defeat, and Bill McGee.

Browns Beat Bosox Twice

St. Louis Wins by 7-6, 10-2; Rain Halts 2d.

St. Louis, July 31 (AP).—July was a bad month for the St. Louis Browns but they closed it today in great style, winning a pair of victories from the Boston Red Sox. They took the first, 7 to 6, with a two-run rally in the ninth, and the second, 10 to 2, after piling up seven runs in the first inning.

In winning his fifth verdict Howard Mills held the Sox to four hits in the short nightcap, called in the seventh because of rain. Two of them were by Jimmy Foxx, who got a triple and his 29th homer of the year. Red Kress and George McQuinn hit homers for the Browns.

Camilli Slugs, Dodgers Snap Pirates' Streak in 4-3 Contest

First Baseman Accounts for All Runs With Homer, Double; 2d Game Rained Out.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, July 31.—Dolph Camilli's big bat and the steady flinging of Rookie Bill Posedel ended the Pittsburgh Pirates' winning streak at four straight today as the Dodgers nipped the National League-leading Bucs, 4 to 3, in the first game of a double-header. The second game was rained out.

Despite the loss, however, the Pirates remained five full games in front of the second-place New York Giants, who were beaten by Cincinnati.

Camilli's 13th homer of the year, with a mate on base in the first inning, sent the Dodgers away in front. In the eighth, his two-bagger drove home the first run of the winning two-run rally, and he scored the deciding marker himself a moment later on Cookie Lavagetto's single.

The deciding tallies came at the expense of Bill Swift, who had relieved a tiring Red Lucas at the start of the eighth. It was Lucas' first pitching appearance since June 6, when he lasted less than one inning against these same Dodgers, and went on the hospital list with a sore arm. The loss was Swift's fifth of the season.

Posedel gave up nine hits and walked only one in chalking up his seventh victory against four defeats. He blanked the Bucs through the first five frames, before Lee Handley's single and Lloyd Waner's double scored the first Pirate run in the sixth. Johnny Rizzo hit his teenth homer of the season in the seventh, and in the ninth the Bucs scored their final marker on doubles by Paul Waner and Arky Vaughan. But with the tying run on second base, Al Todd grounded out.

Giant Errors Help Reds Win by 7-6

2 Misplays in Eleventh Allow McCormick to Score Big Run.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 31 (AP).—The Giants' fielding collapsed in the eleventh inning today, and the Cincinnati Reds shoved a run across on a pair of misplays for a 7-to-6 victory.

The defeat left the Giants five games behind the pace-setting Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League race, and ended their three-game winning streak.

The New Yorkers virtually handed the game to the Reds, after coming from behind with a three-run blast in the eighth to tie it up. Buck McCormick opened the eleventh with a single, went to second on a groundout, to third when Mel Ott let a throw from the outfield get past him, and scored when Walter Brown, third Giant pitcher in the game, made a poor toss to Catcher Gus Mancuso.

Zone Match To Germany

Berlin, July 31.—Germany won the European zone Davis Cup final from Yugoslavia today when Henner Henkel, German ace who has just recovered from an arm injury, fairly blasted Josip Pallada off the court to win the deciding match in straight sets, 6—4, 7—5, 6—1.

Germany immediately forfeited the final match which was to have sent George von Metaxa against Ferenc Puncec, thus making the final count, 3-2. The German team will play the winner of the American zone final between Australia and Japan in the interzone matches at Brookline, Mass., the week of August 18.

Playing before a packed gallery, Henkel did not appear bothered either by his injured arm or by the terrific heat. He showed a complete reversal of form since his singles defeat by Puncec Friday. He exhibited a smashing attacking game, although he lost points frequently by netting his drives. Pallada's steady, cool game could not stave off Henkel's rush in the last set after the Yugoslavian star had pressed his rival hard in the second.

A pair of substitutes ended the series with an exhibition match in which Franz Kukuljevic, of Czechoslovakia, defeated Hans Redl, of Germany, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2.

Quist Beats Tapia In Davis Cup Play

By the Associated Press.

The Australians will leave tomorrow for Montreal where they will meet Japan this weekend in the American zone finals at Montreal icans will return home to compete in their national tournament.

Alice Marble Beats Dorothy Bundy for Sea Bright Title

The Punch Line...

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Title Fight Flops.

Shhhh! Don't breath a word but we have it straight from our New York undercover man that Lou Ambers' lightweight title bout with Henry Armstrong will be shoved back until September because of the poor advance ticket sale.

According to our agent, a usually well-informed lad, less than $3,500 is in Promoter Mike Jacobs' strong box and prospects for reaching a $4,000 level before the end of this week are slimmer than an 1890 waistline, Jacobs is reported to have worn out two sets of pearly teeth gnashing them. He takes things like this very hard.

ATCHISON.

But Jacobs realizes that when the big town tilts a cold shoulder at something you may as well pack it in moth-balls and put it away for another year, or peddle it to the Eskimos. There is only one known remedy—a postponement, and there have been occasions when the treatment backfired and cleaned the house entirely of all ready cash. Jacobs, however, will gamble on a postponement for this bout and attempt to whet the fans' collective appetite for a view of the two men in action—at prevailing prices.

One of the two prospective contestants, featherweight-welterweight - lightweight - challenger Armstrong, the dusky dynamo, or Ambers suddenly will wake up one of these mornings and find himself afflicted with a stubbed toe, sprained larynx, dislocated conscience, or possibly a sprained thumb — incurred hitch-hiking back to camp from a neighboring town. He may feel fine, actually, but that will be his story, and he will not be permitted to stick by it.

Ambers Fight Here?

From publicity headquarters will come the mournful bleating of Mr. Jacobs' hirelings that Armstrong or Ambers (only one to a customer) is ailing and the fight, consequently, will be moved back to September—about the seventh of the month. If the ticket sale still lags Jacobs will have to stage the show at a loss and fire his publicity department for failing to needle sufficient interest into the affair.

Meanwhile, it is reliably reported that Ambers, if the show is postponed, of course will fight in Washington on August 15. His opponent will be Norment Quarles, of Richmond, who was scheduled to meet Lou Gevinson on that date until the Washington boy pulled out because of a bad shoulder. Quarles is scheduled to go against Yucatan Kid August 8, at Richmond, but if the Ambers match is made he'll be excused from that engagement—unless it looks as though Yucatan will not cut him up or permanently disable him.

Dear Sir:

"Bat" Woodson did not fight "Jumbo" Eggleston that night at Ardmore when the lights went out. The fighter's name was Sailor Patterson and Pat O'Connor was the third man in the ring that night. I am quite sure of that. As ever, Charles Lombardi, 223 Third street southeast.

Our thanks to Mr. Lombardi for the correction. We, of course, weren't present that night. We only heard, and thought we were quoting reliable sources.

We notice where Herr Goldie Ahearn plans to pit the winner of tonight's Mamakos - Nedomatsky bout against George Abrams in the near future. Why? Abrams is a middleweight, allegedly, and the other pair welterweights.

Does George need a 10 to 12 pound weight advantage every time he goes to the post? Or must a man merely have one broken leg and a sprained arm?

Bring in a legitimate middleweight for him if Ahearn insists on foisting him on the public, somebody like Harry Balsamo or Solly Kreiger. After all George is supposed to be a rankling fighter now—or was that only a publicity gag?

Jimmy White, cagey manager who has acquired control of Joey Green's fistic future, has faith in the District lad and thinks he can shove him right up with the top-ranking lightweights within a year. He wants about a year and some co-operation from Joey to accomplish the task.

Dundee also is awaiting Ken Overlin's return to this country before mapping the former tar's future course. He has offers to box Apostoli and Hostak on the Coast, but Ahearn wants to bring Ken in here for Abrams.

Irish Eddie Dunne boxes Howard Scott in Baltimore August 8, while Phil Furr faces Tony Petrotsky in Chicago tonight . . . "Hobo" Williams will return to the city ring wars soon . . . possibly against Angelo Puglisi, who scored a T. K. O. over Rusty Baker last Monday night.

Notice Managers.

All Prince George's County baseball managers are requested to attend the meeting to be held at the home of Pop Chroniger on Wednesday evening, in regard to a county championship series. The manager of Klein's Tavern is asked to call GReenwood 2762.

Grove Nine Loses.

Takes Match In Straight Sets, 6-2, 6-2

Star Gains Permanent Possession of Famous Tennis Trophy.

By the Associated Press.

Sea Bright, N. J., July 31.—Alice Marble, America's top-ranking woman player, won permanent possession of the historic championship bowl at the Sea Bright Invitation Tennis tournament today by crushing Dorothy Bundy, a fellow Californian, 6—2, 6—2, to capture her third consecutive title in the 51-year-old grass court classic.

Miss Marble became the first star to retire the championship trophy with consecutive victories since 1923, when Mrs. Molla B. Mallory climaxed a 3-year reign over the field. Another bowl passed out of the club's hands in 1932, however, when Helen Jacobs retired it.

Miss Bundy, who eliminated the former national champion last year at Forest Hills, made a game bid in the final round, but was never able to get started.

Playing superbly and maintaining her record of not losing a set in the tournament, Miss Marble kept the pressure on her younger opponent all the way. Kept at the baseline by Miss Marble's stinging drives, Miss Bundy played strictly a defensive game, scoring most her points when the defending titleholder erred.

Waltzing through her final opponent in much the same fashion as Bobby Riggs did yesterday in whipping Elwood Cooke for the men's crown, Miss Marble swept through the first four games of the opening set. Miss Bundy broke through the champion's service in the fifth game and held her own service in the sixth, but the pace was too much to maintain.

The champion led 4-1 in the second set although she lost her service in the third game. Miss Bundy took another game in the sixth by holding service, but as in the first set she never was in an attacking position.

So marked was Miss Marble's superiority over her Wightman cup team mate that few games were deuced and the match lasted only 33 minutes.

Displaying entirely too much power for their opponents, Sidney B. Wood, of New York, and Joseph R. Hunt, of Los Angeles, walloped Chester and William Murphy, Chicago twins, 8—6, 6—2, 8—6, to take the men's doubles championship.

The Murphys, who upset the top seeded doubles pair of Riggs and Bitsy Grant in a five-set semi-final match, found their usually successful bobbing tactics futile against rangy players like Wood and Hunt who put away a good portion of their points on overhead smashes.

Golf

140. D. Griffen was third, a stroke behind the leaders with consistent rounds of 87-88, 175-34, 141.

WASHINGTON.

Washington's match play against par tourney found the higher handicapped entrants marching off with the prizes. G. C. Ristine, playing with a 36 handicap, finished eight up on perfect figures while Elmer Jenkins, with a 12 and H. M. Nelson, who plays to a six, tied for second each six up on par.

R. B. Munson defeated A. T. Hester on the nineteenth hole to enter the final round of the Horton Cup event, where he will oppose R. L. Negle for the trophy.

INDIAN SPRING.

Professional Al Jamison and his partner, Bill Lord, halved the first hole in birdie threes in a match against Lou Harrison and Louis Semia—and were one down.

For Harrison's second shot, a six iron found the cup for an eagle two and Semia made the foursome four under par for the hole as he chipped in the cup from off the green for a par.

Paul Dobrowolski holed a seven iron shot on the eighth hole for an eagle deuce while playing with Mr. and Mrs. R. W. May.

Three players tied with identical scores in the Blind Bogey tourney at the Four Corners Club, Louis Semia, Dave Mastbrook and T. R. Burrows all scoring 78-6—72.

CAPITAL.

C. Henry Cohen, former Washington and Lee University links captain, scored a 72 yesterday over the Capital Links, used his two stroke handicap allowance and finished all even with perfect figures to win the Match Play against Par Tournament.

Billy Houghton was the runner-up, finishing two down to par, after shooting a 74.

WOODMONT.

Howard Nordlinger scored one of the best amateur rounds of the season over the Woodmont links, a 71, including a one under par 34 on the out nine and a 37 coming back. Harry Brown Bildman and Bobby Baum were members of the foursome.

COLUMBIA.

B. L. Hartz cracked par figures by three shots on the second nine at Columbia, registering a 32 in company of Merrill Lord. L. J. Goode and George Ferris.

Blue Monday . . . Which reminds us of the Nats . . . Well, at least they're showing some consideration for the local fan . . . You know they could have started to build winning streaks for the opposition here instead of on the road . . . Don't be surprised if George Lentz, who recently resigned as Catholic University trainer and handyandy, soon accepts a similar position with George Washington . . . Lentz and Colonial officials have been conferring and Lentz would be a welcome addition to the G. W.'s, who miss Roland Logan . . . George Brandt, former Central High athlete, is now employed by a local lumber company . . . John Busick, the G. W. publicity director who is beating the tom-tom for the playground department, tells you his work is most confining . . . You see his office in the old police headquarters building is plump in the middle of a cell block! . . .

Jack Kreamer, the East Potomac life guard, is so fond of Virginia Beach and its surfboard riding that he plans to take a guard test there next summer . . . The writer has entry blanks for the third annual Western Maryland championship swimming and diving meet and the same can be obtained by sending self-addressed, stamped envelopes . . . This meet is open and is scheduled Friday at the Celanese Athletic Association pool in Cumberland . . . Brooklyn ball club officials are reported to have alloted $300,000 to Larry MacPhail, who has convinced them that such a sum is needed to build a pennant contender . . . And that a pennant contender would increase attendance to 1,000,000 fans . . . Already the search for new talent is on with 14 Dodger scouts scouring the minors . . . Chances are it won't do. Brooklyn much good, however, since the clothing of a new player in a Brooklyn uniform seems to invest him with the urge to steal occupied bases and bump his head against fly balls . . . It's something like trying to get a slugger to slug in a Nat uniform.

Note to Maryland U. grads . . . Willie Wolf, the old Turp third base star, is dentist at the District Jail . . . Why don't you drop up and see him sometime . . . Huh? . . . JACK MUNHALL.

Steel Output Edges Upward To 37 Per Cent

Unless Wages Are Cut or Business Increases, Prices May Be Advanced.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 31.—The magazine Steel said today that the "unfavorable immediate outlook" for satisfactory earnings in the steel industry "leads to the supposition that in the event producers are unable to reduce labor costs or to increase their business sufficiently to eliminate present losses, prices subsequently may be advanced."

The magazine said that steel-making operations increased only one point to 37 per cent of capacity last week and recovery during the next month or two will be "gradual at best."

"A few purchases of flat-rolled material have been made for early runs on new automobile models, and there are prospects of additional purchases within the next two weeks," Steel said.

"Restricted assemblies the past several months and a moderate revival in new car buying lately will permit dealer stocks to be reduced materially the next few weeks and place the industry in a favorable position to start the 1939 model season."

The magazine said that steel buyers are "anticipating ample protection" in the event of any future price increases and "are satisfied to adjust current purchases to actual requirements."

Ingot production rose nine points to 38 per cent of capacity at Detroit last week, helping to push the national steelmaking rate to 37 per cent, the highest since November.

Output of Lumber Top for This Year

The lumber industry during the week ended July 23, 1938, stood at 60 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 64 per cent of average 1929 shipments.

Production was about 58 per cent of the corresponding week of 1929; shipments, about 63 per cent of that week's shipments; new orders about 78 per cent of that week's orders, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important softwood and hardwood mills.

Reported production in the week ended July 23 was the highest of any week of the year to date; shipments were heaviest except for one week. Reported new orders were highest reported in 14 months, except for the previous week which was the peak for 1937-38 except for one week in April of last year.

Summer Gain in Store Sales Harbinger of Rise, Babson Says

Unit Sales of Goods Close to Satisfactory Level of a Year Ago, Indicate, He Says, Surge of Business in Fall.

By Roger W. Babson.

Babson Park, Mass., July 31.—Merchants are selling almost as many goods today as they were last summer! This is hard to believe, but it is a fact. Department store sales for the entire country are averaging less than 10 per cent below a year ago in dollars. Meanwhile, price tags have allen almost as much as that. Hence, unit sales of goods are close to the satisfactory levels of a year ago at this time. Furthermore, in many sections trade is actually above the 1937 volume. This, of course, is wonderful news. It means that we are in for a real surge in business this fall.

We often forget that retail trade is one of the best forecasters we have of future business. When stores are crowded, when goods are moving off the shelves, and when cash registers are jingling, we can be sure that more works will soon be having jobs in factories, that additional traffic will be moving over the railroads and that investors will be receiving bigger dividends. On the other hand, when people are not buying goods, a letdown in industrial activity is sure to follow.

Inventories Cleaned Out.

Late last summer buying was beginning to fall off. People had bought all the goods they needed during the winter and spring of 1937. Because of this and because of high retail prices, trade was slowing up by summer's end. As a result, when last Labor Day rolled around, factories had but a few new orders for goods. They had to lay off workers. Then everyone got frightened, stocks broke badly, and we had a discouraging business recession. Within six months from the time the break started, thousands of plants and mills all over the country were shut down tight. Industrial activity plunged 50 per cent below its peak.

The situation became more and more acute as 1938 moved along. Retail trade, however, did not sag so drastically. All during the fall, winter and spring it averaged only 10 per cent below the corresponding months of the previous year. Furthermore, retail price tags were constantly marked down, giving people added incentive to buy goods. Despite the fact that several million had been laid off, national purchasing power was not reduced materially. More Government checks and higher farm income offset other losses in buying power. Furthermore, a big percentage of people, who always have money to spend for retail goods regardless of whether we are in prosperity or in depression, resumed their buying.

Retail Buying Wave.

Consequently, retail sales dropped only moderately as against a sharp slump in industrial activity. Production through the spring was not equaling consumption. Inventories were cut down to rock bottom. This could not continue long. Suddenly investors, deciding that the storm had blown itself out, rushed in to pick good securities at bargain prices. This happened in the middle of June. Since then there has been a hurricane of good news. On every hand we read about factories reopening, of railroad traffic increasing, of homes and other big projects being constructed. Not since the days following the bank holiday of 1933 has there been as swift an uprising as we have had in the last six weeks.

Leading the advance has been retail trade. More people have gone shopping each week since mid-June. Now, dollar buying is less than 10 per cent under last year at this time. Because of the sharp drop in prices, however, this means that merchants are selling as many goods, in number, as they were then. Steel activity, machine tool orders, carloadings, power production, building and other powerful barometers are pointing to better business this fall. But more important than these—retail trade, which means the final movement of goods into consumers' hands, is rapidly picking up momentum.

Outlook Rosy.

Because of this splendid gain in retail trade, plus bumper crops, billions being spent for relief, the skyrocketing of security prices, sharp advances in commodity quotations, the potential demand for goods, our huge credit reserves, and the mounting volume of construction, I look for the sharpest increase in business this fall in many years. Volume in the months ahead may not equal the volume of some good autumns in the past, such as 1936 or 1929. However, the speed of the business recovery between now and election day can surprise even the most optimistic observers.

Those who read my New Year forecast, written in the glommy days of late December, 1937, may recall the following opening paragraph:

"We are not entering a major depression; 1938 will see a resumption of the upward trend which began in 1933. The first quarter may be poor—much worse than the early months of 1937; but later in the year I look for a substantial revival. Do not confuse this current sharp recession with a major depression! Pay rolls, prices, stocks, real estate and jobs should all be on their way up to new highs by the end of 1938."

Get Started Now.

We may not, perhaps, reach new highs this year, but readers can count upon a tremendous upsurge in coming months. Merchants, manufacturers, bankers, salesmen, workers and investors should capitalize on the huge upturn which lies ahead. This is the time to get started. Do not wait until after Labor Day and miss five full weeks of real activity. Plan your advertising campaigns now. Get your employees and sales forces in shape. Forget hand-to-mouth buying. Stock your shelves thoroughly. We are facing four or five months of rushing business. Cash in on it!

Insurance Stocks Reach Year's Peak

New York, July 31.—Insurance stocks in the New York City market closed the past week showing moderate gains after registering a new high, according to records compiled with Hoit, Rose & Troster. The aggregate market value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on July 25 reached a new high for the year to date of $590,846,000. The aggregate value at the close on July 29 totaled $589,627,000, to compare with $587,975,000 at the close of the previous week, a net increase of $1,652,000 or 0.28 per cent over the previous week.

Says—

I get a lot'a amusement jest quietly listenin' to fellas out here in Hollywood who are supposed to be experts, spoutin' off about somethin' they don't know anything about. It jest goes to prove that old sayin' that "everybody is ignorant, but on differ'nt subjects."

"I was listenin' yesterday to one of those "experts" sound off about how to build a log cabin and it put me in mind of Uncle Snub, That's my uncle that got awful rich through oil property. As soon as he got rich he tried to be "toney," too, and he went into an art gallery to buy some pictures.

The art dealer said "We have here the original painting 'An Artist's Mother' for $50,000.00." Uncle Snub says "No, I'll have'ta have something else. You see, I've already got that picture at home on the feed store calendar."

Hull's Defense Of Trade Pacts LaudsSen.Pope

Secretary of State Hull gave a "pat on the back" to Senator Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, an Administration supporter seeking re-election this year, in a letter made public yesterday denouncing critics of the Government's trade treaty program.

Hull's letter replied to one from Pope inviting comment on an editorial in the Idaho Farmer contending American agriculture had been "sold down the river."

"Very real progress" has been made, Hull asserted, in obtaining from other nations concessions of value to American agriculture.

"As additional agreements are concluded, the beneficial effects of the program will be progressively enhanced," he predicted, calling attention to current negotiations for a trade treaty with the United Kingdom, most important outlet for American farm products.

Important to Peace.

"The essence of the matter is," Hull declared, "that this program is not only in the immediate practical interest of every important group in the United States—and by all means of the farmers—but it is also the most powerful constructive force in the interest of world peace, upon which the welfare of peoples everywhere is so dependent.

"It is, I am sure, because you also realize these things that you have so consistently supported the program; and I am glad to take this opportunity to express my appreciation of the splendid support which you have given."

Hull said that although last year the United States imported $1,581,000,000 worth of agricultural products, $711,000,000 of the imports consisted of rubber, coffee, tea and other non-competitive products.

Sugar Imported.

Another $166,000,000 was of sugar, which is on a quota basis "highly advantageous to the domestic industry," he said, and $477,000,000 represented products of which this country normally had large domestic deficiencies.

"The importation of such products increases the foreign purchasing power for products of American farms and factories just as much as does the importation of non-agricultural products," Hull said.

Further, he argued, farmers shared materially in the increased domestic purchasing power resulting from the foreign trade in manufactured products, of which last year's exports totaled $2,500,000,000 and imports $1,431,000,000.

Even Chief G-Man Can't See Social Security Records

By the Associated Press.

Not even J. Edgar Hoover can look at the Social Security Board's records for criminal investigation purposes, board attaches said yesterday.

Officials said the board opens its files concerning workers to claimants of benefits, Treasury officials or State jobless insurance commissions.

But they are made available to police officials or private individuals only to help identify a victim of murder or loss of memory. Police looking for a fugitive, a deserted wife tracing a wandering spouse, or the estate lawyer hunting a missing heiress are turned away, it was said.

Collar-bone Broken As Scaffolding Falls

J. M. Behan, 30, 800 Fifth street northeast, suffered a broken collarbone and shock yesterday when he fell 15 feet from a scaffolding at 4718 Shadyside avenue, Bradbury Heights, Md.

Behan was assisting in building a new home for a brother-in-law when the scaffolding broke down. He was treated at Gallinger Hospital.

Flanders Quits Housing Post For N.Y. Job

He Was Drafted in 1934 to Help Organize Bureau.

Senior Deputy Administrator William D. Flanders, of the Federal Housing Administration, will leave his position with the Government this month to become president of the new Lawyers Title Corporation of New York, it was announced yesterday.

A native New Yorker and formerly engaged in the real estate and mortgage business there, Flanders was drafted by the Administration in 1934 to assist in the organization of the Federal Housing Administration. He is expected to leave to take over his new post about September 1.

Morris S. Tremaine, comptroller of the State of New York, will be chairman of the board of the new corporation, which is a merger of the old Lawyers Title Corporation and the New York Title Insurance Co.

"Mr. Flanders played a large part in the successful operation of the Federal Housing Administration," Tremaine said yesterday, "and the company is to be congratulated upon the acceptance of the presidency by him."

Second in command of FHA, Flanders serves as acting head during the absence of Administrator Stewart McDonald. During his affiliation with the Government organization, Flanders was in close touch with those engaged in the mortgage and real estate field throughout the country.

Md. Man's Leg Mangled Trying Out Motorcycle

Attempting to ride a motorcycle yesterday may cost Grover Wingate, 27, of Edwards Ferry, Md., his right leg. Wingate was thrown from the machine and dragged nearly 25 feet when he was learning to ride the motorcycle on the farm of a friend, Samuel Jarboe.

Rushed to Georgetown Hospital by the Rockville rescue squad, physicians feared he might have to have the leg amputated.

U. S. Embassies Driven From Pillar to Post By Wars and Threats of War in Four Nations

By the Associated Press.

War and the threat of war have chased American Embassy and Legation staffs helter-skelter these last few years.

The American Embassy in China will make its second move of the Sino-Japanese war today or tomorrow—approximately the second anniversary of the closing of the legation at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. The legation in Vienna has become a consulate and the embassy in Madrid is in its third city since the Spanish civil war began.

Bowers Moves Twice.

Mussolini's campaign in Ethiopia started it all. Following conquest of Addis Ababa, the United States decided to close the legation there and recalled Minister Cornelius Van Engert.

At about the same time, the Spanish civil war caused Ambassador Claude C. Bowers to leave northern Spain. Along with other ambassadors, he went to France. Madrid shook under shells and aerial bombs, and the embassy and remaining staff were moved to Valencia.

When the Spanish government moved from Valencia to Barcelona the American Embassy followed. It is now perched among the hills behind Barcelona. The State Department receives dispatches from St. Jean de Luz, France, signed by the American Ambassador to Madrid, and from Barcelona, signed by the American counselor of embassy at Madrid.

Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson in China was forced to vacate the capital at Nanking for Hankow, farther up the Yangtze River. Now he must leave Hankow for Chungking, some 1,300 miles from the coast. His moving days were determined by the moving of the Chinese government.

One New Location.

Adolf Hitler's absorption of Austria left this country with a legation to a government that no longer existed. Although the United States did not formally recognize Germany's acquisition of Austria, it converted the legation into a consulate.

In this time of casualties among the embassies and legations the United States has been able to create one new legation, Lithuania, which had been linked with Estonia and Latvia in the jurisdiction of one minister, was given a minister of its own.
